CITY EYES ANNEXATION OF UNION TWP.

It's a Season for Songs--and Smiles!

REVERENCE AND ENTHUSIASM, even with a few front teeth missing, is typical of the joy in singing those wonderful old Christmas carols. Elaine Horney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Horney, 417 Eastern Ave., and Stevie Sword, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert L. Sword, 432 Earl Ave., enjoy this season in a way that only a photograph can show. Both are pupils at Rose Avenue School.

Entire Area Included in Council Bill

City Council, in a surprise move Monday morning, placed on first reading an ordinance for the annexation of all unincorporated area of Union Township to the City of Washington C. H.

Moved by Council President Ronald Cornwell and seconded by Councilman Walter Morrow who said that they feel the best possible approach to the matter of annexation would be to place the all-inclusive proposal before the voters in May, the legislation was branded as "premature" by both City Manager James F. Parkinson and Council Vice President Robert Sanderson.

Sanderson agreed, however, that the measure should go on first reading for discussion purposes. Three readings are required before it can be passed.

IF ANNEXATION of the entire township were approved by Union Township voters next May, it would not make actual annexation mandatory. The matter would first go to county commissioners for their approval or disapproval.

The annexation ordinance was read in the closing minutes of a regular Council session moved up in order not to conflict with the Christmas holiday.

It apparently was the outgrowth of a series of informal meetings of groups of councilmen.

The city manager said he did not object to annexation measures necessary for the growth of the city, but that he feels that the large increase in city expenses which would be made necessary by incorporating all of Union Township should be carefully studied before any action is taken.

Councilman Morrow said that much study had been given to the proposal, but Parkinson observed that if matters of financing and administering such an area had been carefully investigated, he was not aware of it.

COUNCILMAN Ben Norris said that "this is more than we really need" but he added that he thinks that this is the only way to get an annexation job done.

Sanderson said he feels that premature consideration to the annexation of all of Union Township means that Council "is going off half-cocked" and urged that city legislators get a "full picture" before taking action which would commit the city to a policy which has not been fully studied.

The city manager observed that the surprise proposal represented a "great expansion" of the suggestions made in past informal sessions of Council and made reference to "increasing pressure" exerted on councilmen for annexing all of Union Township. He did not identify any pressure group, but opponents of the Miami Trace school district have been urging this type of arnexation program for several weeks.

Annexation would be for municipal purposes only, but any expansion move is related to the Fayette County school issue since the State Board of Education has a policy of transferring areas annexed for general purposes to the annexing districts for school purposes.

THE CITY MANAGER indicated that he thought the new council-

In today's Record-Herald you will find their Christmas greetings -- heartfelt and sincere!

McElroy Quieting Missile Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense McElroy may become the Eisenhower administration's chief asset toward softening sharp criticism from congressmen on the progress of the missile and satellite programs.

McElroy, two months in the Cabinet, has shown some signs of becoming the take-charge sort of official many Democrats have said is needed to crack the bottlenecks they contend have let Russia take the lead in rocketry.

Whether Congress tries its hand at shaking up the Defense Department, possibly through establishment of a separate agency to develop missiles and satellites, seems likely to depend largely on McElroy's performance in the next few weeks.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas had made it clear the prime objective of an investigation of the missiles program by the Senate Preparedness subcommittee he heads is to push the administration into full-blast action on space weapons.

JOHNSON HAS indicated he doesn't care particularly who does the job or how it is done, just so missiles are produced in quantity.

McElroy evidently made a good first impression on subcommttee members when he announced he had lifted overtime restrictions and restored some funds to the missile program.

Several members said they liked McElroy's action in ordering continued development on both the Jupiter and Thor intermediate range ballistic missiles. With one of the competing weapons scheduled to be dropped, there had been uncertainty about the work on both.

If McElroy comes up with some new moves to straighten out the guide lines, simplify Pentagon procedures and get the missile supply belt moving, he could go a long way toward tempering the continuing criticism.

Some critics hailed McElroy's announcement last week that he will ask Congress in January for about a billion dollars in immediate new money.

Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn) said this action indicated the defense secretary is "getting the sense of awareness some of us would like to see."

Sen. Revercomb (R-WVa) said he thinks McElroy can get whatever money he needs from Congress. Revercomb said he found within the administration none of the complacency about which Democrats have been complaining. Instead, he said there was a "note of seriousness but no hysteria."

Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) proposed that Eisenhower devote his full time to being commander in chief and turn over 'housekeeping chores" to Vice President Nixon. He said Eisenhower could hand domestic problems over to Nixon while he took personal charge of the defense and foreign programs.

Vargo, 28, unemployed father of two children, was fatally injured in a two-truck crash while he was on his way to pick up a load of trees to sell.

Tragedy Occurs On CCC Highway

Stalled Truck Hit; Fire Brief Threat

A Pennsylvania truck driver was killed instantly about 6:55 a. m. Monday when his tractor-trailer rig crashed into the rear of another truck which had stopped on the CCC Highway about six miles north of here.

Sheriff Orland Hays identified the victim as Joseph Bagdonas, about 45, of Pittsburgh, Pa. A fire which started in the wrecked threatened briefly to turn his smashed cab into a funeral pyre, but it was extinguished before it did major damage.

Bagdonas was Fayette County's fifth traffic fatality of the year. He was the third person to die as a result of traffic accidents this year on that stretch of the CCC Highway.

rig driven by William Mansel Gibson, 40, of New Concord, which had been driven to the edge of the road after two tires went flat.

Gibson, who told Sheriff Hays he was getting his flares out when the accident occurred, was not held.

Skid marks at the scene and other evidence indicated Bagdonas saw Gibson's parked vehicle too late and made a futile attempt to drive his southbound truck around it. He crashed cab - first into the rear of the crippled flatbed.

THE FIRE started in the midst of wooden construction materials loaded on Gibson's truck. Two wreckers were rushed to the scene to drag the flaming trailer away from Bagdonas' cab.

Four trucks from the Bloomingburg Fire Department were called to extinguish the blaze.

It took ambulance crewmen 45 minutes to extricate Bagdonas' body from the twisted framework of the cab. The force of the crash crumpled the snub - nosed Diesel engine, and compensating momentum had pushed the trailer forward into the cab's back wall.

The truck was loaded with heavy, duty metal barrels, apparently filled with glue. State Highway Department crewmen were called to the scene to clean about half a barrel of the substance that had been spilled on the highway

IN A STATEMENT to Sheriff Hays and County Prosecutor Rollo Marchant, Gibson said he had pulled to the side of the road after he felt two tires go flat, and had just asked a passing motorist to locate a garageman in Washington C. H.

She's 106 And Planting Tobacco Today

WEST LIBERTY, Ky. (AP)—Lots of relatives and friends were stopping by today to wish Aunt Jeston Gevedon a happy birthday, a Merry Christmas and another year of enjoying life.

Aunt Jeston smokes three or four times a day. She smokes up about a pound of tobacco a month, the crimp-cut kind. Been doing it for 90 years, and it's one of the reasons she says she's lived so long.

She says she feels fine. Her eyes are good and there's a twinkle in them. Her voice is clear and strong. And if you speak up some, Aunt Jeston's little bit of hearing trouble isn't any worry.

When people drop by today Aunt Jeston will be wearing her usual fresh, ruffled dust cap, and a dark red shawl she saves especially for company. She'll have spent some time getting "prettied - up" for friends, but then she fusses over her appearance on ordinary days too.

But nothing really bothers her (another reason she credits for her long life). She said, "I never worry 'cause I've never done anyone wrong."

Land and Sea Missile Bases Asked by NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles make a radio-television report to the nation tonight on the NATO conference last week in Paris.

The conference, seeking unity among the North Atlantic Treaty countries in the face of Russia's missile developments, adopted a two-way approach.

The NATO chiefs of state approved the U. S. idea of basing intermediate range missiles in Europe and at the same time called for further disarmament negotiations with the Russians.

Russia already has indicated it is not interested in a NATO-proposed meeting of foreign ministers to discuss disarmament. Soviet leaders called instead for a special United Nations session, or some other full - scale international conference.

THE EISENHOWER - Dulles broadcast will be carried "live" at 8:30 p.m., EST, by CBS-TV and all four major radio networks. ABC-TV will carry the program on film at 10:30 p.m., and NBC will show it at 11:30 p.m.

The President returned last Friday from Europe and he has not made any public statements about the NATO meeting since then.

Dulles said upon his arrival here Saturday that the 15-nation Atlantic Pact meeting "took all the essential decisions for which we had hoped."

Christmas Snow Possible in North

COLUMBUS (AP) — The weatherman says there is a slight chance that Christmas will be a white one—in Northern Ohio only. He says temperatures in the Buckeye state will average five to seven degrees above normal for the next five days.

The five-day forecast calls for cooler Tuesday and Wednesday, day and colder Friday or Saturday.

The forecast calls for rain about Christmas Day and Saturday in the southern part of the state. The precipitation may come in the form of snow in the northern part of Ohio.

Hope Is Held For 28 Men On Lost Ship

LONDON (AP) — Rescue officials still held hope today for 28 crewmen missing from a Scottish freighter which went down during a mercy mission in a raging North Sea storm.

Royal Air Force planes despite bad weather resumed the search at dawn for survivors of the 1,991,-ton Narva, which sank Sunday.

The Narva, en route to Sweden from Aberdeen, Scotland, with a cargo of pulp, ran into trouble about 120 miles southwest of Stavanger, Norway, while reportedly going to the English coastal vessel Boswell, in difficulty in the same area.

The 865-ton Boswell also sank, but its 14 crewmen were picked up by an English trawler about 150 miles east of Kirdkleness, Kincardineshire.

An official of Geln and Co., which owns the Narva, said up to 20 of the crewmen could be on an inflatable life raft a plane reported sighting or that some of them were aboard a ship without radio communication.

The Norwegian passenger ferry Leda reported she sighted a distress light signals from the Narva but that the freighter disappeared in darkness about 4:40 a.m., before a lifeboat from the Leda could reach her.

Secretive Utah Teen-Agers Report Rocket Test Success

OGDEN, Utah (AP)—A trio of secretive teen-agers has an announcement for the world. Their weekend firing of a rocket was "successful."

No motion picture news cameras ground, no government officials observed, no bulletins on countdown proceedings were issued.

The two-inch heavy steel rocket, 69 inches long, roared through the clouds over northern Utah. It hurtled back to earth, as planned, near the "secret" launching site. It was recovered "very badly mangled."

The boys, using trigonometry, calculated their rocket had gone up 3,600 feet at a speed of 338 m.p.h. It took 15 pounds of solid chemical fuel to do the job and the material burned about a second.

Then the youths forgot security momentarily to "leak" word of their accomplishment to the press.

Absolute secrecy was necessary they said, lest other "unexperienced" rocketeers injur themselves trying the same thing.

Noell Marble, Weber High chemistry instructor, and E. Rich Green, physics teacher, monitored the project "with very little direct supervision."

Another firing is scheduled before the year is out and future rockets will be of two-stage design using different fuels and carrying "instruments."

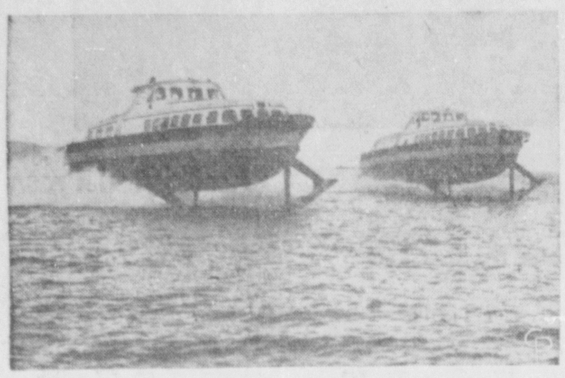
Italian-Operated Hydrofoils Revolutionize Water Traffic



Riding clear out of the water at 50 miles per hour on their hydrofoils, these startling boats already are a sensation on the Mediterranean sea and soon may be skimming over lakes and rivers near big cities in the United States.

By FRANKLIN JOHNSON
Central Press Assn

MESSINA, Ital—Boats that literally "walk on the water," carrying as many as 75 passengers at more than 50 miles an hour, are catching on so rapidly here for ferry service that they soon may make their appearance on many American lakes and rivers.

Known as hydrofoil boats, they are equipped with bands of metal fore and aft which sweep under the hull and act the same as the wings of an airplane when deep-digging propellers thrust them forward.

They rise slowly out of the water, except for the hydrofoils themselves, as speed gradually picks up and finally fly over the waves at a rate once thought impossible for large craft.

The hydrofoil ferry service that is attracting the most worldwide attention from engineering and transit authorities plies between Italy and Sicily, covering in just 10 minutes a distance that once took an hour with conventional craft!

SEVERAL SURVEYS now are progressing to adapt the boats to commuter service in such cities as Chicago and Cleveland on the Great Lakes, and St. Louis on rivers.

With land transportation nearly strangled at the rush hours by the limited capacity of roads, streets and rails, the adjacent waterways could prove a boon if hydrofoil boats were available to skim over them smoothly at high speeds.

So far more than 200,000 passengers have been carried on the Italy-Sicily run in boats which are virtually unsinkable because of their foam-filled hulls, and uncapsizeable because of the low center of gravity with their underslung foils.

MESSINA is near the fabulously rough waters which led ancient mariners to invent the legendary monsters of Scylla and Charbdis, yet the passengers avoid seasickness on the hydrofoils, and even sip drinks mixed at a bar aboard.

In the United States, experimentation is being done on Lake Mendota at the University of Wisconsin under a grant from the Office of Naval Research and Development.

The Russians now control the Gebr. Sachsenberg shipyard at Dessau-Rosslau in East Germany, and re reported to be doing much testing.

Notable work was done there on hydorfoils between the World wars, and boats built there were in ferry service on Lake Maggiore.

AFTER NEARLY 5,000 years of displacement vessels which float by what engineers and scientists call "buoyancy and static lift," Hanns von Schertel opened the door to hydrofoil development in 1927 by inventing a craft which successfully performed on Lake Lucerne in Switzerland.

The Italians, who have been so enterprising in the further development of the new type craft, afterward instituted daily international passenger service between the Swiss and Italian ports of Locarno, Pallanza and Arona.

What causes the eyes of engineers to bug out are such hydrofoil accomplishments as reduced fuel consumption by 50 per cent lower that of ordinary boats; lower operating costs by 30 per cent; great maneuverability which outmodes extensive docks, to say nothing of the speed and smoothness.

Boys Choir To Sing at St. Andrew's

The Fayette County Boys Choir will present its annual concert of Christmas music in conjunction with the Evensong service at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church Sunday evening, Dec. 29.

The service will open with an organ prelude at 7:45 p. m., and the processional will begin at 8 p. m.

The Rev. Donis D. Patterson, rector, will conduct the prayer service, and Mrs. Robert E. Willis, who organized the choir, will conduct the young singers.

David Foster, Bloomingburg, a senior at the Oberlin Conservatory of Music, will be guest organ soloist, and Jan Thompson, Dayton, a second-year major at Oberlin and former Dayton Boys Choir member, also will be a special soloist.

Holy Land shopkeepers and hotel proprietors looked forward to a profitable Christmas season as visitors scared away last year by Middle East war rumblings flocked back.

With some 6,000 tourists expected, hotels already were booked solid in Jerusalem, Jericho and other towns around Bethlehem.

The no man's land between Jordan and Israel was quieter than it has been in years. Jordan's King Hussein lifted the night curfew from the Arab side of the Holy Land for the Christmas festivities.

NOEL, Mo. (AP)—Volunteer workers at the Noel Postoffice expect to stamp the Noel postmark on half a million pieces of mail this Christmas season.

Much of it is sent here in large batches by individuals and companies who want the special Noel touch on their greeting cards.

GAZA (AP) — U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold arrived today for a Christmas visit to U. N. Emergency Force troops along the Egyptian-Issaeli frontier.

He also will confer with Egyptian President Nasser on unsolved Suez Canal problems.

The 68-year-old prelate met patients in the Camp Zama U. S. Army hospital and celebrated mass for personnel at the U. S. 5th Air Force headquarters at Fuchu Air Force Base.

Pope Calls Upon All Mankind To Halt Global Arms Race

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Pius XII called on mankind Sunday to halt the arms race lest it lead to disaster and endanger the fate of "the earth itself." He implied that he endorses the West's proposals for controlled disarmament.

In his 19th annual Christmas message to the world, the 81-year-old pontiff counseled Christians not to fear Russia's current triumphs in the Sputnik field.

But he warned that the cost of an arms race is ruinous.

"Such quantities of material, such sums of money derived from savings and the result of restrictions and toil," he said, "such expenditures of human labor taken away from urgent need, are consumed to prepare these new arms."

"Even the wealthiest nations," he cautioned, "must foresee the times in which they will regret the dangerously weakened harmony of the national economy, or are in fact already regretting it, though endeavoring to conceal the fact."

Without calling them by name, the pope endorsed the North Atlantic Alliance, the United Nations and Western disarmament proposals, saying: "The divine law of harmony strictly imposes on all rulers of nations the obligation to prevent war by means of suitable international organizations, to reduce armaments under a system of effective inspection, to deter whoever should aim at disturbing the peace with the most fully guaranteed mutual dependence between the nations which sincerely desire it."

Holiday Songfest Is Friday Evening

Plans for the holiday songfest to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wipert at 7:30 p. m. Friday today are just about complete. And, Mrs. Wipert predicted it will be one of the best yet.

Features of the affair, Mrs. Wipert said, will be the "white elephant" gift exchange and the "finger food" refreshments.

Mrs. Wipert said the "white elephant" gifts could be "almost anything," from gifts received at Christmas, which did not fit or were the wrong color, to something bought brand new from a store—"almost anything," so long as it is wrapped and brought to the songfest.

The "finger food" refreshments are nothing new; Mrs. Wipert said she just wanted to make certain th songfesters do not forget to bring them. The question of whether to continue the practice was put to a vote a couple of meetings back and the result was overwhelmingly in favor of it.

Christmas music will make up most of the program, Mrs. Wipert said, but added that the group will sing other songs if requested.

Tax Collection Time Extended

Commissioners OK Jan. 20 Deadline

The festive spirit of Christmas time was in evidence around the Courthouse Monday, with all the women workers in the various offices completing the details of preparation for the annual "courthouse party" at 2 p. m. Monday afternoon.

The event this year is being held in the county commissioners' office which has been gaily decorated for the occasion. All officers and employes in the Courthouse and members of the Fayette County Bar Association participate.

For this reason the commissioners held their regular Monday meeting in a rear office of the auditor's department.

THE BOARD passed a resolution extending the time for tax collection, from Dec. 20 to Jan. 20, because of delays which prevented starting collections in November.

A resolution also was passed by the commissioners for the Courthouse to be closed for Christmas beginning at noon Tuesday and reopening Thursday morning for the regular hours the remainder of the week.

Another resolution passed at the last meeting of the board granted the usual one year lease to the Fayette County Agricultural Society for holding the Fair next year. This was acknowledged by the Fair Board in a letter received at Monday's meeting. The Fair Board accepted the terms of the 1958 lease at the regular rate of $2,250 a year.

Only a few routine matters and approval of bills otherwise occupied the attention of the board at this meeting.

Italian-Operated Hydrofoils Revolutionize Water Traffic

Riding clear out of the water at 50 miles per hour on their hydrofoils, these startling boats already are a sensation on the Mediterranean sea and soon may be skimming over lakes and rivers near big cities in the United States.

By FRANKLIN JOHNSON
Central Press Assn

MESSINA, Ital—Boats that literally "walk on the water," carrying as many as 75 passengers at more than 50 miles an hour, are catching on so rapidly here for ferry service that they soon may make their appearance on many American lakes and rivers.

Known as hydrofoil boats, they are equipped with bands of metal fore and aft which sweep under the hull and act the same as the wings of an airplane when deep-digging propellers thrust them forward.

They rise slowly out of the water, except for the hydrofoils themselves, as speed gradually picks up and finally fly over the waves at a rate once thought impossible for large craft.

The hydrofoil ferry service that is attracting the most worldwide attention from engineering and transit authorities plies between Italy and Sicily, covering in just 10 minutes a distance that once took an hour with conventional craft!

SEVERAL SURVEYS now are progressing to adapt the boats to commuter service in such cities as Chicago and Cleveland on the Great Lakes, and St. Louis on rivers.

With land transportation nearly strangled at the rush hours by the limited capacity of roads, streets and rails, the adjacent waterways could prove a boon if hydrofoil boats were available to skim over them smoothly at high speeds.

So far more than 200,000 passengers have been carried on the Italy-Sicily run in boats which are virtually unsinkable because of their foam-filled hulls, and uncapsizeable because of the low center of gravity with their underslung foils.

MESSINA is near the fabulously rough waters which led ancient mariners to invent the legendary monsters of Scylla and Charbdis, yet the passengers avoid seasickness on the hydrofoils, and even sip drinks mixed at a bar aboard.

In the United States, experimentation is being done on Lake Mendota at the University of Wisconsin under a grant from the Office of Naval Research and Development.

The Russians now control the Gebr. Sachsenberg shipyard at Dessau-Rosslau in East Germany, and re reported to be doing much testing.

Notable work was done there on hydorfoils between the World wars, and boats built there were in ferry service on Lake Maggiore.

AFTER NEARLY 5,000 years of displacement vessels which float by what engineers and scientists call "buoyancy and static lift," Hanns von Schertel opened the door to hydrofoil development in 1927 by inventing a craft which successfully performed on Lake Lucerne in Switzerland.

The Italians, who have been so enterprising in the further development of the new type craft, afterward instituted daily international passenger service between the Swiss and Italian ports of Locarno, Pallanza and Arona.

What causes the eyes of engineers to bug out are such hydrofoil accomplishments as reduced fuel consumption by 50 per cent lower that of ordinary boats; lower operating costs by 30 per cent; great maneuverability which outmodes extensive docks, to say nothing of the speed and smoothness.

BY MRS. JOHN MORGAN

MILLEDGEVILLE — Cub Pack 303, Boy Scout Troop 303 and the O-Ki-Hi Camp Fire Girls held a family Christmas Party at the Chaffin School House Tuesday evening.

All enjoyed a pot-luck supper with The Rev. Robert Slocumb, pastor of the Milledgeville Methodist Church, giving the invocation.

The Camp Fire Girls provided a gam for the kiddies present. A pinata, made of a pasteboard box filled with candy, chewing gum and balloons, was hung in the recreation room.

A cub or scout was blindfolded and given a broom stick to strike at the pinata. When it burst all kiddies made a grand scramble for the contents.

Each child received a handful of balloons. Before the evening was over it sounded like the Fourth of July with so many balloons bursting.

Cubmaster Charles Hiser introduced Joe Hut', Boy Scout field executive, who made a few remarks and also was present for uniform inspection of Cubs and Scouts.

Cub Scout David Harris graduated from the Cubs to Boy Scout Troop 303. In absence of Scoutmaster Grant Morgan, because of illness, Assistant Scout master Edward Rankin welcomes David into the troop.

The assistant scoutmaster presented delayed Merit Badges.

They gave each of the Scouts a merit badge sash. Den mothers presented the Cubs with stationery. The Cubs made ear rings and hand-painted pillow slips for their mothers, also fixed key holders and telephone memorandums for their fathers, and billfolds.

O'Neill Mum on Reelection Plans; Ohio Dems Pondering Their Slate

By REED SMITH

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—"When will you announce for reelection, governor?"

The governor merely grins broadly and waves the questions aside. It is a foregone conclusion in GOP circles that he will announce before the Feb. 5 filing deadline for the May primary elections.

Speculation is rife that O'Neill's declaration may be later than usual next month. One reason is that he has a report-to-the-people for Jan. 26. He has made a series of public service broadcasts this year.

But once O'Neill becomes a declared candidate, the status of such a program would change. Democrats could be expected to demand equal broadcast time on grounds that he was campaigning and that they should be allowed to answer him.

"He probably will be smart enough not to give us that chance," a Democratic spokesman ventured.

The distinction between a public official and a candidate also would apply to other activities of the governor, politicians explained.

Some organizations and service clubs, pressing the governor to address their meetings, have rules against invitations to political candidates. Similar preferences often apply to civic groups and other affairs frequented by public officials.

O'Neill has made numerous appearances over the state since he became governor nearly a year ago. His activities have led some to assert that he never stopped campaigning.

The governor and Mrs. O'Neill have entertained frequently since moving into the new executive mansion in suburban Bexley. Some guests have been individuals but many have been public officials and political leaders. Even the governor's severest critics in his own party reportedly have melted in the warmth of hospitality at breakfasts, luncheons, dinners and receptions.

All that could be placed on a different basis with a declaration of candidacy, politicians assert.

They added that even appointments by the governor to boards, commissions and other posts are more open to political attack when made by a candidate.

Then, too, a candidate is expected to outline a program, defend his record and take a stand on controversial issues which he is better able to hedge, if so minded, before announcing.

All of which adds up to late announcements by gubernatorial incumbents unless they feel the need for an early declaration to prevent serious opposition in their own party. O'Neill appears unconcerned about such a situation.

Unless he changes his mind, don't look for U. S. Sen. Frank J. Lausche to run for governor again. This was one of the disclosures last weekend from a meeting of the Ohio Democratic Advisory Committee which began a search for a slate of candidates for the 1958 state election.

Preliminary discussion concerned qualifications of more than 30 potential candidates.

The 12-member committee adopted a statement pointing up its aims in which it said that "in addition to encouraging qualified candidates to run for state office, we are seeking candidates who also will place the welfare of our state and our party above their own personal interests."

The committee then invited "anybody interested in running for state office" to come to a Jan. 6 meeting of the committee at party headquarters in Columbus.

At the committee's closed-door meeting, Hamilton County chairman John A. Weithe reported that Sen. Lausche is not interested in running for a sixth term as governor next year. Weithe is on a subcommittee which contacted Lausche.

The last Democratic contender for the gubernatorial post — the year Lausche ran for the Senate—was former Toledo mayor Michael V. DiSalle, and he was soundly thrashed at the polls by the present governor, Republican C. William O'Neill.

Nevertheless, DiSalle is among those considered by the committee at its meeting Friday.

Other names tossed in the political hopper for gubernatorial nomination include Columbus mayor M. E. Sensenbrenner; Cleveland mayor Anthony J. Celebrezze; Mrs. Vicienne Suarez, Columbus housewife; Cuyahoga County engineer Albert Porter; Robert N. Gorman of Cincinnati, former Ohio Supreme Court judge, Clingan Jackson, Youngstown newsman, and Thomas A. Burke, former interim U.S. senator and Cleveland mayor.

For lieutenant governor: Robert L. Moulton of Galion, former public Utilities Commission chairman Robert Koch of Van Wert, chairman of the State Liquor Board, Roy Hopple, Columbus attorney, and Charles H. Hubbell of Cleveland.

For attorney general: John W. Peck of Cincinnati, former state tax commissioner; John Holliday of Gallipolis, member of Democratic State Committee, and Timothy Hogan of Cincinnati.

For treasurer: Harry E. Marshall, Jefferson County treasurer, and John W. Donahey of Alliance, son of former Gov. Vic Donahey.

For secretary of state: Mrs Mary Gorman of Cincinnati, wife of Robert N. Gorman, and Mrs. Ruth Lloyd Wilkins, Columbus attorney.

Also mentioned as possible candidates, without any particular office designated, are mayors Leo Berg of Akron and Edgar L. Lash of Massillon and Paul Hinkle, state bank superintendent; Robert Reider. Port Clinton publisher and former member of the Legislature, and Paul Ward, Columbus attorney and former candidate for attorney general.

Christmas - A Wonderful Day To Remember

Another Christmas is practically here affording us many opportunities for reflection upon the blessings which are ours.

In the spirit of humility and thankfulness, all of us here in this nation should count those blessings, the greatest of which is freedom, as they think of the helplessness, and practically the slavery, of hundreds of millions of individuals in other parts of the world.

This is a time to remember some of the things that make life worth living in this country; the right to go to the church of our choice; the right to read any newspaper, magazine or book we choose; the right of choice in a free market; the right to congregate with our friends and relatives, without fear; the right to travel when and where we please over three million square miles of country without having to ask any one's permission; countless other rights too.

By no means least, we should be thankful for any and all families for Christmas which permits the children of any family to gather 'round the Christmas tree with its pretty lights and pungent evergreen scent; for the quiet and peacefulness of the outdoors compared with the rush of a business day; the sound of church bells in the distance; the voices of friends wishing "Merry Christmas."

Christmas in the United States is a leavening influence that draws families and citizens closer together. Truly next Wednesday is the Day of Days.

Today's issue of the Record-Herald carries scores of joyful greetings and best wishes of the season from many business and professional people who join with the Record-Herald staff in wishing a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all.

If we can keep the peace one day, can we not keep it another, both at home and abroad? This day gives us experience of the beauty and joy of peace. Can we not keep our faith in peace? Can we not work towards it steadily?

Peace does not come through weakness; it is of the essence of strength. Our lesson therefore is to be firm in single character, in national character; strong enough to maintain peace in ourselves and require it from others, in spite of troubles and vexations. Not only today, but every day, we must have faith in peace, in good will. As time moves on this spirit surely must be felt among those who see others who are touched by it.

Peace on earth, good will to men, should be the prayer of every person on Christmas Day.

Jersey Ox Aiming at Hamlet?

By Hal Boyle

EVERGLADES, Fla. (AP)—Here under the surprised gaze of critical alligators in a wilderness where only water mocassins are in the social swim, Dominick Anthony Galento is making his major bid for his first Academy Award.

"Acting makes me more nervous than fighting ever did," said Galento, "but all I need to get ahead is to read up on my reading."

Two Ton Tony, the boy bootlegger who became New Jersey's most famous saloon keeper and during a fabulous 100-fight carer came within a punch or two of reaching the world heavyweight boxing throne, is quite serious in believing his future lies before the camera.

"If Lou Nova can get away with quoting Shakespeare, why can't I?" he asked. "After all, didn't I beat his brains out in fourteen rounds?"

If Tony, the Jersey ox, isn't quite ready for Hamlet, 47 years judicious hamming certainly haven't left him totally unprepared for the arts of the theatre. One can say that without even mentioning his post-graduate training as a professional wrestler, during which he successfully met a 50-pound octopus in Seattle, and grappled him tentacle for tentacle.

Galento, who has survived two plays, is before the lens in his third movie, "Across the Everglades," a drama written by Budd Schulberg and co-produced by Budd and his brother, Stuart.

It has one of the oddest casts ever assembled for a movie. The stars and supporting players include folk singer Burl Ives, TV star Christopher Plummer, Chana Eden, a lady veteran of the Israeli navy; Gypsy Rose Lee, novelist Mackinley Cantor, circus clown Emmett Kelly and ex-jockey Sammy Renick.

Galento plays an ex-convict who joins the outlaw, bird murdering feather gatherers, and among other chores he has to carry the carcass of a 250-pound pig and break apart ex-jockey Renick in a savage, bloody, muddy battle.

He hopes his present adventure in cinematic villainy is but a prelude to more heart warming roles.

Tony's final summation of this present movie job is this:

Let's Keep Our Powder Dry

By George Sokolsky

Whenever I am among foreigners, Euopeans, Asiatics, Africans, Latin Americans, I am among intense nationalists. They all are excited about their particular country and extol its special virtues.

However, to speak of the United States of America as a nation, to say that it needs to be defended, to believe that it possesses special virtures—these seem to be sins. Most of the Americans present become embarrassed, as though one were referring to an old grandfather who could no longer control his nervous system.

Some even openly apoliogize for the crudeness of matching someone's chauvinism by proclaiming American chauvinism. How vulger can you be!

There is a mood about Russia that I have long observed. It started way back in 1917 and it continues to this day. Those in such a mood say: it is wrong to confuse Russians with Communists. The Communists have governed Russia for 40 years, the Russians hate them! The Russians would have got rid of the Communists but they are afraid that foreigners will conquer their country; therefore, they have submitted to Lenin and Trotsky, to Stalin, and now to Khrushchev.

But soon, any day (it has been so since 1917) they, the Russian intelligentzia, youth, peasants, laborers (take your choice), will rise up, rid the world of the Communist beasts, and there will be peace and good will upon earth.

This is the oldest line about Soviet Russia. I heard it in 1917-18 from John Reed and Raymond Robins; I heard it when I lived in China and Borodin was trying to conquer that country; I heard it in 1933 when Litvinov was winning recognition for Russia from Franklin D. Rooseveit; I heard it from the White Russians who had run away during the Russian revolution and who, having settled in various countries and having restored their aristocratic lineage, hated the Communists (to whom they referred as Jews) but loved Russia and grew ecstatic even with Stalin (who was not a Russian but a Georgian), when he became an ally (it was a foul trick) during World War II.

Now, it pops up again and one is given a big dose of circumstantial leads to believe that just because Hungary and Poland talked up to Khruschev the Kremlim crowd is on the brink of defeat and the Communist world on the verge of dissolution and that all we need to do is wait for the Russian people to rise up in their might and they will send Khrushchev orbiting in a Sputnik.

The argument goes that the Hungarian revolt was a success but that Soviet Russia suppressed it. The logic does not present itself, but do you want logic, too?

The sentimental notion is that the Communist party control over Soviet Russia will be ended in a short time because the Hungarian revolt did not fail but was suppressed.

Does that mean that the United States should disarm, put its stockpiles of bombs into the ocean, give up its bases everywhere, stop its missiles and rockets developments and jovially wait for the new Russian revolution to put Khrushchev in a Sputnik and aim the Sputnik at us?

It is a risky thought and those who go about the country promising the United States a revolution in Moscow in a few years are promising more than they can produce.

Futhermore, how does anyone know that such a revolution, if it occurred, would not produce Napoleonism rather than peace? Hoe do we know that Khrushchev might not be replaced by some general who would use the enthusiasm of the moment to engage upon a world wide campaign of conquest?

How do we know that Khrushchev's ally, Mao Tze-Tung, would not rally forces that would be worse than what we face today?

I fear that the sentimental line is a dangerous one because Americans are a peace-loving people who hate war and would prefer to think well of their neighbors and particularly of former allies.

It is such an argument which encouraged the mamas to make such a fuss about bringing the boys home for Christmas in 1945-6, scaring members of Congress into the premature disbanding of American forces after World War II.

A better and truer position is to keep our powder dry and to be ready to shoot it out with anybody who wants to subdue this country.

New School Bond Issue Law Expected

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — W. B. Bliss, executive secretary of the Ohio Education Assn., Sunday predicted renewed efforts in the next legislature to enact laws making it easier to pass school bond issues.

He said school bond issues in Ohio this year were given their worst support in a decade.

Bond issue passage now requires a 55 per cent majority vote at regular elections, and a 60 per cent majority at special elections.

Bliss said the number of bond issues approved this year dropped 15.8 per cent below last year's figure and was considerably lower than in any year since 1947.

'Old Wives' Tales' Are Better Ignored

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

BARNUM said there was one born every minute. After listening for many years to the superstitious beliefs about health and medicine, I am forced to agree that we have a staggering number of gullible people.

Few persons have bowlegs today. Yet you would be surprised at the number who still insist that this characteristic results from permitting a child to "walk too soon."

Cause Eliminated

The fact is that medical science has now overcome rickets and other conditions which caused bowlegs.

Many mothers also firmly believe that teething can cause infection. Again, this just isn't so. While teething may cause crossness and fretfulness, it takes bacteria or a virus to cause infection.

An astounding number of people are convinced that grinding the teeth while sleeping indicates the presence of worms. The truth is that grinding the teeth is a nervous habit associated with restlessness, not with worms.

Won't Help

I dare say that many of you think the best treatment for stopping a nosebleed is to press the upper lip or place ice on the back of the neck. These measures won't help at all. Most nosebleeds will stop by themselves.

If you don't know the cause of the bleeding, and it occurs frequently, you had better see your doctor. Not only will he be able to stop the bleeding, but, more important, he'll find out what is causing it.

Strong Organ

Your heart is the strongest and hardest working organ in your body. Still the belief persists among many of us that sleeping on the left side damages the heart.

You can sleep in any position that is comfortable. Your heart is well protected by the ribs, muscles and fibrous tissues of the chest.

But, without doubt, the most dangerous fallacy is believing that fancy gadgets with flickering lights and a flamboyant advertising campaign will do just about everything from curing ingrown toenails to cancer.

Trust Doctor

Don't put your trust in a machine. Place it in your doctor.

If he says a specific medical gadget will be of help in your particular case, follow his advice. But take all of the old wives' tales, passed on by well-meaning friends, with the proverbial grain of salt.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

R. W.: I have had a recurrent pain in my right shoulder. What can be the matter with me?

Answer: Pain in the shoulder may be due to inflammation of the muscles, nerves, or joints; some circulatory disorder; a disturbance in the spine; a disorder affecting the nervous system.

Downtown Los Angeles Santa Is Veteran Movie Comedian

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Parents who take their children to see Santa Claus at a downtown Los Angeles store may recognize the twinkle in Santa's eyes. He's Chester Conklin, the longtime movie comic.

Little, bald, goggle-eyed Chester has been at the Santa business for nine years, the last five at J. W. Robinson's department store. And he loves it.

"You can't get tired when you see the wonderful, fresh faces of those kids," he said. "I talk to about 400 a day, sometimes as many as 500. But they're all interesting.

"Some of them hold back and are afraid to talk to me. Some get on my lap and can't say anything. I tell them to be sure to write me a letter and tell me what they want.

"I remember myself how excited I was about Santa Claus when I was young, how I tried to stay awake on Christmas Eve to see him. A child loses a lot when he loses his belief in Santa Claus."

Chester, born 71 years ago in Oskaloosa, Iowa, started in show business as a vaudeville monologist in Des Moines. His career took him through every phase of show business, including stock acting and clowning with the Al G. Barnes circus. When the circus wintered in Venice, Calif., in 1912, Chester got a job with Mack Sennett's new studio.

He first found fame as one of the original Keystone Kops. Recently he was a regular in the Eddie Mayehoff TV series.

How did he get into the Santa business?

"A friend of mine had been doing it and recommended it to me," he said. "Nine years ago, I heard that a store needed a Santa and I applied. I've been doing it ever since.

"It works out fine, because the picture business is always slow this time of year. Things don't pick up until after the tax season in March."

Thief Takes Single Bite from Apples

DALLAS (AP)—Police have found the thief who has been taking bites out of apples sent the officers as a Christmas gift.

"It wouldn't be so bad," Capt. Will Fritz had said earlier, "if the guy would take one apple and eat it. But he takes a healthy bite out of one apple and puts it back. He's spoiled several."

But Sunday Fritz caught the thief in the act. The large rat jumped from the apple box and escaped through an air conditioning shaft.

The Nation Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — For President Eisenhower this can hardly be a merry Christmas. He finds his leadership more seriously questioned than at any time in his life. And not just because of his health.

When he took office in 1953 this country was ahead of the Russians militarily. It is not now, at least in missiles. While he, the military leader, saved on expenses, the Russians soared ahead militarily.

Now Eisenhower must decide how to catch up. Out of this bloom other problems, crying for solution, here and elsewhere: money, taxes, foreign policy, dealing with Congress, domestic programs.

He must boost military spending. Yet, in doing so, he faces the twin tasks of stopping inflation and fighting off a growing economic downturn. Living costs have been rising almost continuously; now unemployement is adding to the problem.

Eisenhower would like to cut taxes. It would crown his efforts to balance the budget. It would be good politically, since 1958 is a congressional election year. With defense costs going up, tax cuts seem impossible.

And there are the problems of foreign policy. For instance: the Middle East. When he first took office, the Russians were frozen out of there. They have a strong foothold now. He has not yet found a way to pry them out.

Even how to deal with the Russians is different from when he took office in 1953. Then Russia was behind militarily. This country could negotiate from strength. Even then the Russians made no concessions.

Now they can negotiate from strength. Concessions from them seem less likely than ever. But, as the Allies showed in Paris last week, they want peaceful settlements with the Kremlin, or a try at them.

Even dealing with Congress will be tougher in 1958. In Eisenhower's first few White House years the Democrats not only were not critical of the President, but seemed in awe of him.

In fact, his own party gave him more trouble in those days. Now the Democrats are openly critical and may try to do the leading if he falters.

On domestic problems, since they're tied in with spending and spending is tied in with more money for defense, these next few weeks are the toughest and most grueling of the year for Eisenhower.

The reason: Congress returns next month and Eisenhower must have his program, foreign and domestic, more or less ready for presentation then.

For example, he must finish his budget — the amount of money he'll ask for everything—and get his budget message and his State of the Union message ready for delivery soon. Although much of this has been done, final touches are still required.

In addition to his recent trip to Paris, all this piles up on him as he is recovering from a mild stroke, his third serious ailment in little more than two years.

Your Yule Tree May Be From Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Your Christmas tree this year may be just one more Ohio farm crop used in your home.

That is because the Christmas tree farm is becoming a big business in Ohio. At the last reports of the U. S. Forest service and the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, more than 900 Ohioans owned and operated them.

Although a few cover several hundred acres and are a primary source of income for their owners, studies indicate the average is about 15 acres and is a sideline. In some cases, the Christmas tree farm may be a profitable hobby for a professional or business man.

Although it takes 6 to 10 years—and close attention to protect young trees from weeds, insects, the danger of fire, and other threats—to grow a marketable crop, Ohio has certain advantages for the grower.

These include a climate favorable to most species of evergreen used at Christmas, city markets close at hand and land which, not level or fertile enough for most crops, will support the trees.

Some growers belong to the Ohio Christmas tree growers council, where ideas on everything from planting techniques to the best way to shear trees are discussed.

Downtown Los Angeles Santa Is Veteran Movie Comedian

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Parents who take their children to see Santa Claus at a downtown Los Angeles store may recognize the twinkle in Santa's eyes. He's Chester Conklin, the longtime movie comic.

Little, bald, goggle-eyed Chester has been at the Santa business for nine years, the last five at J. W. Robinson's department store. And he loves it.

"You can't get tired when you see the wonderful, fresh faces of those kids," he said. "I talk to about 400 a day, sometimes as many as 500. But they're all interesting.

"Some of them hold back and are afraid to talk to me. Some get on my lap and can't say anything. I tell them to be sure to write me a letter and tell me what they want.

"I remember myself how excited I was about Santa Claus when I was young, how I tried to stay awake on Christmas Eve to see him. A child loses a lot when he loses his belief in Santa Claus."

Chester, born 71 years ago in Oskaloosa, Iowa, started in show business as a vaudeville monologist in Des Moines. His career took him through every phase of show business, including stock acting and clowning with the Al G. Barnes circus. When the circus wintered in Venice, Calif., in 1912, Chester got a job with Mack Sennett's new studio.

He first found fame as one of the original Keystone Kops. Recently he was a regular in the Eddie Mayehoff TV series.

How did he get into the Santa business?

"A friend of mine had been doing it and recommended it to me," he said. "Nine years ago, I heard that a store needed a Santa and I applied. I've been doing it ever since.

"It works out fine, because the picture business is always slow this time of year. Things don't pick up until after the tax season in March."

Thief Takes Single Bite from Apples

DALLAS (AP)—Police have found the thief who has been taking bites out of apples sent the officers as a Christmas gift.

"It wouldn't be so bad," Capt. Will Fritz had said earlier, "if the guy would take one apple and eat it. But he takes a healthy bite out of one apple and puts it back. He's spoiled several."

But Sunday Fritz caught the thief in the act. The large rat jumped from the apple box and escaped through an air conditioning shaft.

WASHINGTON (AP) — For President Eisenhower this can hardly be a merry Christmas. He finds his leadership more seriously questioned than at any time in his life. And not just because of his health.

When he took office in 1953 this country was ahead of the Russians militarily. It is not now, at least in missiles. While he, the military leader, saved on expenses, the Russians soared ahead militarily.

Now Eisenhower must decide how to catch up. Out of this bloom other problems, crying for solution, here and elsewhere: money, taxes, foreign policy, dealing with Congress, domestic programs.

He must boost military spending. Yet, in doing so, he faces the twin tasks of stopping inflation and fighting off a growing economic downturn. Living costs have been rising almost continuously; now unemployement is adding to the problem.

Eisenhower would like to cut taxes. It would crown his efforts to balance the budget. It would be good politically, since 1958 is a congressional election year. With defense costs going up, tax cuts seem impossible.

And there are the problems of foreign policy. For instance: the Middle East. When he first took office, the Russians were frozen out of there. They have a strong foothold now. He has not yet found a way to pry them out.

Even how to deal with the Russians is different from when he took office in 1953. Then Russia was behind militarily. This country could negotiate from strength. Even then the Russians made no concessions.

Now they can negotiate from strength. Concessions from them seem less likely than ever. But, as the Allies showed in Paris last week, they want peaceful settlements with the Kremlin, or a try at them.

Even dealing with Congress will be tougher in 1958. In Eisenhower's first few White House years the Democrats not only were not critical of the President, but seemed in awe of him.

In fact, his own party gave him more trouble in those days. Now the Democrats are openly critical and may try to do the leading if he falters.

On domestic problems, since they're tied in with spending and spending is tied in with more money for defense, these next few weeks are the toughest and most grueling of the year for Eisenhower.

The reason: Congress returns next month and Eisenhower must have his program, foreign and domestic, more or less ready for presentation then.

For example, he must finish his budget — the amount of money he'll ask for everything—and get his budget message and his State of the Union message ready for delivery soon. Although much of this has been done, final touches are still required.

In addition to his recent trip to Paris, all this piles up on him as he is recovering from a mild stroke, his third serious ailment in little more than two years.

Your Yule Tree May Be From Ohio

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Your Christmas tree this year may be just one more Ohio farm crop used in your home.

That is because the Christmas tree farm is becoming a big business in Ohio. At the last reports of the U. S. Forest service and the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station, more than 900 Ohioans owned and operated them.

Although a few cover several hundred acres and are a primary source of income for their owners, studies indicate the average is about 15 acres and is a sideline. In some cases, the Christmas tree farm may be a profitable hobby for a professional or business man.

Although it takes 6 to 10 years—and close attention to protect young trees from weeds, insects, the danger of fire, and other threats—to grow a marketable crop, Ohio has certain advantages for the grower.

These include a climate favorable to most species of evergreen used at Christmas, city markets close at hand and land which, not level or fertile enough for most crops, will support the trees.

Some growers belong to the Ohio Christmas tree growers council, where ideas on everything from planting techniques to the best way to shear trees are discussed.

'Christmas in Other Lands' Program Enjoyed by Garden Club

One of the loveliest parties of the season was enjoyed Friday night by the members and guests of the Fayette Garden Club at the home of the Misses Arbana, Jannette and Josephine Roush, hostesses. Mrs. Maryon Mark and Mrs. Chester Dunn were the assisting hostesses.

As the guests arrived they received beautiful Christmas corsages made by Miss Arbana Roush.

Mrs. Lough, president opened the meeting by reading "A Lonely Life," the story of the life of Jesus and Mrs. Earl Grimm read a beautiful Christmas quotation.

Mrs. Perce Harlow, program chairman, introduced the guest speakers, Mrs. Kenneth Curl and Mrs. Donald Markley, whose subject was "Christmas in Other Lands."

Mrs. Curl, a native of Scotland who became an American citizen in 1953, charmed her audience with her informal discussion of life in her native land. Scottish people being residents of Great Britian speak the English language and their customs are very similar to those of England and our own. They observed Christmas very much as we do with tree trimming and a visit by Santa Claus. Their tree are not put up as far in advance of Christmas as are ours nor do they decorate out of doors. Children open their gifts on Christmas morning and attend church services during the day.

An old superstition of the Scottish people is that the first guest to enter a home after the New Year arrives must have black hair if that family is to enjoy good luck during the year.

Mrs. Markley, a native of England, described a typical English Christmas dinner which consists of chicken and potatoes baked together, sage and onio dressing, brussel sprouts, Yorkshire pudding, and for dessert the Christmas pudding which is very rich and in which a silver coin has been placed. In the making of the puddings and cakes each child is allowed to stir once and made a wish.

Pastry tarts are made the day before Christmas and filled with various sweet ingredients, and sometimes the good housewife as a joke will fill a few tarts with sour pickle and onion relish to the consternation of the eater who is contemplating the delicious taste of a sweet tart.

Among the tree decorations are chocolate cigars and Santas, the mention of which brought back memories of those very items to the guests who could recall when they were popular here.

On Christmas Eve the elders open their gifts and enjoy hours of comradeship eating roast beef, pickled tongue and other foods, after which they attend church services.

Many questions were asked of the speakers who responded graciously, after which the guests wished each other a merry Christmas and lingered to enjoy the beautiful Christmas arrangements made by the hostesses, the tray favors for the hospital, made by the members, and the Christmas Cactus in bloom.

Out of town guests included Mrs. Edward Cox, regional director of District 9, and Mrs. William Moody, both of London, and Misses Helen and Louise Fults, Jeffersonville. Honorary club members, Miss Bess B. Cleaveland and Miss Clara Zimmerman, of this city, were also present.

Following the dinner the group was invited to the home of Mrs. Harry Campbell.

The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Campbell, president, during which reports were given by Mrs. Delbert Haines and Mrs. Robert Goodson.

A card of thanks was read from Mrs. Orley Varney Jr. Discussion was held on projects for the January meeting, and it was decided to make Valentine favors. Mrs James Baughn Sr. and Mrs. Haines were appointed to make arrangements for this project.

Clown dolls, a class project, were completed, and Mrs. John Lonnis was appointed to present them to Memorial Hospital for the children's toy cart for Christmas.

'Christmas in Other Lands' Program Enjoyed by Garden Club

One of the loveliest parties of the season was enjoyed Friday night by the members and guests of the Fayette Garden Club at the home of the Misses Arbana, Jannette and Josephine Roush, hostesses. Mrs. Maryon Mark and Mrs. Chester Dunn were the assisting hostesses.

As the guests arrived they received beautiful Christmas corsages made by Miss Arbana Roush.

Preceding the business meeting the hostesses served from a beautifully appointed tea table centered with a clever carrousel filled with Christmas dainties. Mrs. Wash Lough and Mrs. John Jordan poured tea and coffee.

Mrs. Lough, president opened the meeting by reading "A Lonely Life," the story of the life of Jesus and Mrs. Earl Grimm read a beautiful Christmas quotation.

Mrs. Perce Harlow, program chairman, introduced the guest speakers, Mrs. Kenneth Curl and Mrs. Donald Markley, whose subject was "Christmas in Other Lands."

Mrs. Curl, a native of Scotland who became an American citizen in 1953, charmed her audience with her informal discussion of life in her native land. Scottish people being residents of Great Britian speak the English language and their customs are very similar to those of England and our own. They observed Christmas very much as we do with tree trimming and a visit by Santa Claus. Their trees are not put up as far in advance of Christmas as are ours nor do they decorate out of doors. Children open their gifts on Christmas morning and attend church services during the day.

An old superstition of the Scottish people is that the first guest to enter a home after the New Year arrives must have black hair if that family is to enjoy good luck during the year.

Mrs. Markley, a native of England, described a typical English Christmas dinner which consists of chicken and potatoes baked together, sage and onio dressing, brussel sprouts, Yorkshire pudding, and for dessert the Christmas pudding which is very rich and in which a silver coin has been placed. In the making of the puddings and cakes each child is allowed to stir once and made a wish.

Pastry tarts are made the day before Christmas and filled with various sweet ingredients, and sometimes the good housewife as a joke will fill a few tarts with sour pickle and onion relish to the consternation of the eater who is contemplating the delicious taste of a sweet tart.

Among the tree decorations are chocolate cigars and Santas, the mention of which brought back memories of those very items to the guests who could recall when they were popular here.

On Christmas Eve the elders open their gifts and enjoy hours of comradeship eating roast beef, pickled tongue and other foods, after which they attend church services.

Many questions were asked of the speakers who responded graciously, after which the guests wished each other a merry Christmas and lingered to enjoy the beautiful Christmas arrangements made by the hostesses, the tray favors for the hospital, made by the members, and the Christmas Cactus in bloom.

Out of town guests included Mrs. Edward Cox, regional director of District 9, and Mrs. William Moody, both of London, and Misses Helen and Louise Fults, Jeffersonville. Honorary club members, Miss Bess B. Cleaveland and Miss Clara Zimmerman, of this city, were also present.

Following the dinner the group was invited to the home of Mrs. Harry Campbell.

The business meeting was conducted by Mrs. Campbell, president, during which reports were given by Mrs. Delbert Haines and Mrs. Robert Goodson.

A card of thanks was read from Mrs. Orley Varney Jr. Discussion was held on projects for the January meeting, and it was decided to make Valentine favors. Mrs. James Baughn Sr. and Mrs. Haines were appointed to make arrangements for this project.

Clown dolls, a class project, were completed, and Mrs. John Lonnis was appointed to present them to Memorial Hospital for the children's toy cart for Christmas.

The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Baughn and Mrs. Lonnie Price served punch and dainty Christmas cookies.

U. S. Business Tried To Make Yule Merry

Last 2 Shopping Days To Tell if Volume Matches 1956 Figures

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—If your holiday isn't merry, don't blame it on business trade.

The final tally today and Tuesday will show if total retail store sales push above last season's record dollar volume. The two years are running neck an neck in the stretch.

Christmas spirit this year seems to have risen above talk of recession. Stephen Q. Shannon, executive director of the Greeting Card Assn. estimated that 200 million more Christmas cards made by some 300 manufacturers, are being sent this year than last. Since sales are averaging around 11 cents a card, total retail dollar volume will come to 260 million dollars compared with 245 million dollars in 1956. An extra 70 million dollars will be spent in mailing them.

Makers of decorative lighting say sales are 10 per cent ahead this year and should come to 110 million dollars.

A 12 per cent increase in ordering flowers by wire is estimated by John Bodette, general manager of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Assn.

He says total dollar volume for the holiday season—starting with Thanksgiving and running through New Years — should reach 5½ million dollars.

Many retail stores and mail order houses increased their catalogues this season, both in size and circulation. Sears, Roebuck mailed 7½ million of its 418 page Christmas books at a cost of 5½ million dollars. F. W. Woolworth sent out 4¼ millions, and Allied Stores three million, or 600 thousand more than last year.

Luxury items were featured in most stores. Elgin National Watch Co. of Elgin, Ill., reports that jewelers stocked more higher priced watches this season.

And the Anthracite Information Bureau of New York found a silver lining to that industry's cloud of woes—also in the jewelry shops. Polished anthracite coal nuggets set in sterling silver are on sale as bracelets, rings, free form earrings, necklace pendants, tie bars, cuff links, cocktail picks, demitasse spoons, and highball spoons.

2 Persons Die In Separate Ohio Shootings

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Two persons were slain and four others wounded in two separate shooting incidents across the state Sunday in which jealousy apparently triggered the gunplay.

In Petersburg, a divorced husband, Wilbur Rauch, 41, admitted firing a shotgun blast through the window of his ex-wife's home. Inside, George Shandor, 41, of New Middletown, fell mortally wounded in the chest. Mrs. Alice Rauch, 35, was wounded in the left hand as she stood talking to Shandor.

No charges have been filed against Rauch, arrested a short time later at his mother's home. The couple, divorced three years ago, have five children who were asleep in the Rauch home when the shooting occurred.

In the Dayton area, a 24-year-old man is sought as the wielder of a .38 caliber revolver that riddled bullets throughout a three-room apartment and killed Mrs. Marie McElroy, 27-year-old mother of a two-week-old baby. The baby was asleep and unharmed.

Mrs. Doris Bateman, 33, who lived with the slain woman; her husband, Lonnie Bateman, and Samuel Mills, 24, were wounded in the shooting fray. Detectives said the gunman must have loaded his revolver at least four times.

The gunman, they added, apparently was jealous of attentions paid Mrs. McElroy by Mills.

Investigators said Mrs. McElroy and Mrs. Bateman are white and that Bateman and Mills are Negroes.

$52.50 FOR THOSE DOLLS—Lucile Jean Lee, 4½, receives $52.50 from Los Angeles City Councilman John S. Gibson (middle) and Ransom M. Male TV Stars' Dress Assailed

Most Are 'Sloppy,' Says New York Expert

NEW YORK (AP) — Most male television stars dress sloppily, have bad posture and set a poor example for the country's youth.

"Of course there are many well dressed men on television, but most of them are masters of ceremonies and newscasters. Few rank as stars. Bob Hope and Jack Benny are notable exceptions: they have always dressed in empeccable taste and invariably look dapper.

Who's the worst dressed man to appear on television in recent seasons?

Elvis Presley, says Mack. "You can try — but it's impossible to look more sloppy than Presley. His clothes have that unmade-bed look, as if he shops in a bargain basement."

Other TV personalities whose style of dress leaves much to be desired, in Mack's opinion, are Liberace and Lawrence Welk.

"They go from one extreme to another," he said. "Liberace's dazzling jackets are too spectacular to be in good taste. Welk's are too nondescript. Liberace also is guilty of wearing out-size cufflinks. They look like miniature Sputniks."

Negro Grid Coach Hailed by Town

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — Friends of Tim Crisp are raising funds to give the veteran Negro coach and teacher a little something extra at a high school football banquet next month.

White and Negro citizens of this southern Oklahoma town raised $105 in a few hours after the drive was announced to honor the man they say "has ably helped mold the youth of this area over a quarter of a century."

Burglars Get $5000

SANDUSKY (AP)—Detectives were searching today for burglars who broke into the Bargain Fair store and escaped with $5,000 in cash.

Yule Mail Lost In Columbus Fire

The fire was discovered as workers began to unload a car that had arrived from Pittsburgh. Some 700 bags of bulk mail were in the car. About 100 sacks—some holding Christmas packages — were burned and many others damaged by water.

C. M. Cain, district transportation manager for the post office, said postal inspectors were inspecting all the damaged mail and everything identifiable would be delivered.

Fire Fatal to Girl

CINCINNATI (AP)—Burns suffered last Nov. 28 when she stumbled and fell into a trash fire caused the death at General Hospital Sunday of Laura Rae Tolson, 7.

2 Persons Die In Separate Ohio Shootings

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Two persons were slain and four others wounded in two separate shooting incidents across the state Sunday in which jealousy apparently triggered the gunplay.

In Petersburg, a divorced husband, Wilbur Rauch, 41, admitted firing a shotgun blast through the window of his ex-wife's home. Inside, George Shandor, 41, of New Middletown, fell mortally wounded in the chest. Mrs. Alice Rauch, 35, was wounded in the left hand as she stood talking to Shandor.

No charges have been filed against Rauch, arrested a short time later at his mother's home. The couple, divorced three years ago, have five children who were asleep in the Rauch home when the shooting occurred.

In the Dayton area, a 24-year-old man is sought as the wielder of a .38 caliber revolver that riddled bullets throughout a three-room apartment and killed Mrs. Marie McElroy, 27-year-old mother of a two-week-old baby. The baby was asleep and unharmed.

Mrs. Doris Bateman, 33, who lived with the slain woman; her husband, Lonnie Bateman, and Samuel Mills, 24, were wounded in the shooting fray. Detectives said the gunman must have loaded his revolver at least four times.

The gunman, they added, apparently was jealous of attentions paid Mrs. McElroy by Mills.

Investigators said Mrs. McElroy and Mrs. Bateman are white and that Bateman and Mills are Negroes.

Male TV Stars' Dress Assailed

Most Are 'Sloppy,' Says New York Expert

NEW YORK (AP) — Most male television stars dress sloppily, have bad posture and set a poor example for the country's youth.

"Of course there are many well dressed men on television, but most of them are masters of ceremonies and newscasters. Few rank as stars. Bob Hope and Jack Benny are notable exceptions: they have always dressed in empeccable taste and invariably look dapper.

Who's the worst dressed man to appear on television in recent seasons?

Elvis Presley, says Mack. "You can try — but it's impossible to look more sloppy than Presley. His clothes have that unmade-bed look, as if he shops in a bargain basement."

Other TV personalities whose style of dress leaves much to be desired, in Mack's opinion, are Liberace and Lawrence Welk.

"They go from one extreme to another," he said. "Liberace's dazzling jackets are too spectacular to be in good taste. Welk's are too nondescript. Liberace also is guilty of wearing out-size cufflinks. They look like miniature Sputniks."

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — Friends of Tim Crisp are raising funds to give the veteran Negro coach and teacher a little something extra at a high school football banquet next month.

White and Negro citizens of this southern Oklahoma town raised $105 in a few hours after the drive was announced to honor the man they say "has ably helped mold the youth of this area over a quarter of a century."

Yule Mail Lost In Columbus Fire

The fire was discovered as workers began to unload a car that had arrived from Pittsburgh. Some 700 bags of bulk mail were in the car. About 100 sacks—some holding Christmas packages — were burned and many others damaged by water.

C. M. Cain, district transportation manager for the post office, said postal inspectors were inspecting all the damaged mail and everything identifiable would be delivered.

County Highway Improvements Exceed 80 Miles

Engineer Wagner Reports on Work Done during Year

A total of more than 80 miles of county highway improvement has been carried on in Fayette County during 1957, according to a summary report made by County Engineer Charles P. Wagner.

This work, county officials say, represents a heavy program and, with other improvements made in the last few years, has placed Fayette County in the top bracket of Ohio counties in the matter of improved county roads.

In addition to this the township trustees over the county have endeavored to cooperate as far as possible in supplementing this program with improvements on township roads.

ALL THE COUNTY highway work was authorized by the Fayette County Board of Commissioners, who worked closely with Wagner in viewing needed improvements and in making economical use of available finances to meet the engineer's plans on the projects.

Children's Bureau Urging Closer Study of X-ray Use

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON (AP) — All professions that use X-rays as a diagnostic tool have been urged by the Children's Bureau to increase their studies of its hazards, as weighed against its benefits, in caring for children and pregnant women.

At the same time the public is urged not to demand X-rays from their physician "when he does not find one necessary."

Experts in the field of radiation in a recent meeting presided over by Dr. Katherine Baine, assistant to the chief of the Children's Bureau, said that parents often press for an X-ray in the mistaken idea that an examination is not complete without it.

One expert said: "Some of our patients now ask us for X-rays just as they have been asking doctors for a shot of penicillin for a cold."

With the rapidly increasing potential of radiation sources, Dr. Bain explained the bureau felt a special responsibility to see that the best use is made of X-rays in its programs of service to crippled children, and in maternal health and child care that is "consistent with good care."

"We want to look at the situation a little more clearly so as not to have unnecessary exposure," Dr. Bain said. "At the same time it would be too bad if people got alarmed and did not have X-rays."

"Anything that is effective has some element of danger," she continued. "It's the side effects we have to look out for. Because X-rays have these side effects and can produce some difficulties, we must be aware of the dangers as well as the benefits. This, however, does not mean we should condemn a procedure, or medicine, but that we should use it wisely."

"Experts agree there is no danger in a single X-ray," said Dr. Bain. "It is only in the accumulation of a large quantity. Their advice is not to use all of one's tolerance to radiation on unnecessary doses. One finding was that X-rays ought not be used routinely, but should be judged in relation to the individual need."

Santa Claus, Ind., Got Its Name on A Christmas Eve

Except for a lucky break, the town might have had another name and thus would not have enjoyed the annual fame that it enjoys with each Yuletide season.

Originally the name Santa Fe was chosen, but officials in Washington suggested another name be chosen, since there already was a Santa Fe in New Mexico.

So it was that on Christmas Eve, in 1882, citizens of the nameless town gathered to select another name. Suggestions were tossed about for some time, until Santa Claus, making his yearly visits in the neighborhood strode in to get warm. He was attired in proper costume and his arrival seemed to put one name in every mind.

And so the town was named Santa Claus.

Parsonage on Wheels Travels Colorado

CREEDE, Colo. (AP)—The Rev. Mary S. Grubbs, Congregational Church pastor uses a trailer as a parsonage. She believes her parsonage is the only one on wheels.

Rev. Grubbs, with the use of her trailer, brings the gospel to rural communities. Without the 31-foot trailer, Creede and Maybell would be without a Congregational pastor. The two towns are 500 miles apart.

Funds for purchase of the trailer were raised by the Congregational Pilgrim Fellowship. Capable with carpenter tools, Rev. Grubbs built a study and desk in the trailer. She has a mimeograph machine in the bedroom.

The Star of Ivan

A Christmas Poem by Ken Woodman

Grim Ivan called his son outdoors
And pointed up among the stars.
"You see that light, my boy," he said,
"That gleam more brilliant than red Mars!
That is a sputnik we have put
Out into space to warn all lands
Our nation is the most advanced
In science and skill with our hands."

"It is indeed," the boy replied,
"An overpowering stratagem!"
His sister, who was listening, sighed:
"It's like the star of Bethlehem."

"Be still," grim Ivan cautioned her.
"This is a purely Russian star."
The girl looked up and shyly asked:
"Don't wise men see it from afar?"
"Yes, child, some scientists perhaps
Are tracking it across the skies.
And capitalists will be trapped
By it in all their boasts and lies."

"It is indeed," the boy exclaimed,
"An overwhelming stratagem!"
His sister mused: "Its light seems aimed
Right toward Judea's Bethlehem."

"It does not move," the boy observed.
"Of course it does," the father railed.
"It circles earth twelves times a day."
But as he watched the father paled.
"I cannot see it move at all,"
The girl insisted as she stared.
"It has to move! That's Moscow's plan.
Some fool has goofed." The father glared.

"Perhaps," the boy said soothingly,
"This is some new-type stratagem!"
The girl lisped: "Father, could it be
The actual star of Bethlehem?"

Grim Ivan, feeling weak and chill,
Now quickly turned his head away.
He'd helped to launch it. It MUST move!
If only he had learned to pray . . .
Quite suddenly he heard a sound
And raised his eyes to heaven again.
From near the star sweet voices sang:
"And on earth, peace, good will to men."

Ecstatically, the boy leaped high.
"This is our super stratagem!"
The father knelt and told his son,
"This is no deed that man has done."
For shining in his daughter's eye
He glimpsed the faith of Bethlehem.

But, best of all, he's the patron of Christmas, giving gifts to little children as Santa Claus.

Round about Fayette County

By B. E. KELLEY

A lot of us, as youngsters, lived in the days when a few cents worth of hard mixed candy, a bag of peanuts (sometimes) and a package of firecrackers made a wonderful Christmas.

I mean those of us who were members of sizeable families where there was not much money to spend, and parents did their best to stretch two or three dollars to provide something for everyone of the "kids", denying themselves in the process.

When I was a small boy in northern Fayette County, living back in the field and woods a mile from the nearest highway, there was an open fireplace in the house where we burned wood, which was the only heat in the entire house except the kitchen.

Because the mantel would not hold all of the stockings hung up for Christmas—(and we youngsters always hung up our stockings, which were knitted by mother from wool yarn)—without some of them getting too hot, we suspended them over chair backs.

Christmas eve, when the fire was burning low and it was nearing time for the bedtime prayer, we gathered about mother and listened open-eyed as she once more related, the greatest story ever told of the Babe in the Manger and the angels hovering over it with a great star in the heavens, while the wisemen and shepherds came in awe and reverence to worship Jesus.

I look back to those Christmas mornings, and recall the eagerness with which we hurriedly dressed and lost no time getting to the "living room" where Santa Claus was to leave our meager gifts—which did not seem meager to us.

We took the things from the stockings with as much joy as we would show today if Santa left us a new automobile.

And if there were an extra little present, in addition to candy, peanuts, and firecrackers (for we boys), what a thrill we had, and what a joy it was to know that we had been remembered so liberally.

We never had a Christmas tree, and few or no Christmas decorations, the case in homes of so many folks in those days.

We could hardly wait to get outside, in the darkness of early Christmas morn, and shoot those firecrackers, for their exploding with sparks flying in all directions, was just as wonderful as the noise they made.

Other youngsters who were more fortunate (and fewer in number) fared better than we, but they could not have been any happier.

I pause here a moment, to wipe the mist from my eyes as I again live Christmas in the halcyon days of boyhood which can never be recalled and now turn once more to the still more wonderful days of the present.

MUCH PLOWING

As Christmas approaches it finds probably more plowing done in Fayette County than at any time in recent years, indicating that our farmers are keeping well abreast of their work, and making every hour count toward next year's crops.

Tens of thousands of acres of ground have been broken in recent weeks, and more will be turned over as weather permits, so when planting time comes, most of the land in the county will require only conditioning to receive the seed.

The Star of Ivan

A Christmas Poem by Ken Woodman

Grim Ivan called his son outdoors
And pointed up among the stars.
"You see that light, my boy," he said,
"That gleam more brilliant than red Mars!
That is a sputnik we have put
Out into space to warn all lands
Our nation is the most advanced
In science and skill with our hands."

"It is indeed," the boy replied,
"An overpowering stratagem!"
His sister, who was listening, sighed:
"It's like the star of Bethlehem."

"Be still," grim Ivan cautioned her.
"This is a purely Russian star."
The girl looked up and shyly asked:
"Don't wise men see it from afar?"
"Yes, child, some scientists perhaps
Are tracking it across the skies.
And capitalists will be trapped
By it in all their boasts and lies."

"It is indeed," the boy exclaimed,
"An overwhelming stratagem!"
Right toward Judea's Bethlehem."

"It does not move," the boy observed.
"Of course it does," the father railed.
"It circles earth twelves times a day."
But as he watched the father paled.
"I cannot see it move at all,"
The girl insisted as she stared.
"It has to move! That's Moscow's plan.
Some fool has goofed." The father glared.

"Perhaps," the boy said soothingly,
"This is some new-type stratagem!"
The girl lisped: "Father, could it be
The actual star of Bethlehem?"

Grim Ivan, feeling weak and chill,
Now quickly turned his head away.
He'd helped to launch it. It MUST move!
If only he had learned to pray . . .
Quite suddenly he heard a sound
And raised his eyes to heaven again.
From near the star sweet voices sang:
"And on earth, peace, good will to men."

Ecstatically, the boy leaped high.
"This is our super stratagem!"
The father knelt and told his son,
"This is no deed that man has done."
For shining in his daughter's eye

The Toll Gates Are Gone, but the Memories Linger

Christmas Visitors Once Arrived by Stagecoach

The clatter of horse's hoofs and rumble of steel - tired wheels in Court St. on Christmas Day 110 years ago, heralded arrival of the stage coach over the east - west route through the county.

The coming of the stage coach was always "an event", and local residents invariably gathered at the old inn on Court St. just as they used to do at the depots years later for arrival and departure of the passenger trains.

Many persons are not aware that Washington C. H. at one time was on a stage coach route. As a matter of fact two or three stage coach lines crossed Fayette County, one coming from Chillicothe over the White Rd. route, thence northwestward through Bloomingburg over part of the Sargeant Rd., and continuing northwestward to Springfield.

But the main route through Washington C. H. was from Zanesville "and points east" to Cincinnati, and the first trips, according to folklore were made each way twice each week, and later more often.

SINCE the stage coaches, which were drawn by two and sometimes four horses, ran on certain schedules (not always possible to follow), Uncle Sam entrusted his mail bags to them. They were typical conveyances, much resembling those of the "wild and woolly West" years later.

This east and west route followed the present U. S. 22 route from Cincinnati to Zanesville.

Passengers frequently were well known figures of that day, including those high in federal government offices. Only those with substantial funds could afford to travel by coach.

Inasmuch as the east - west highway through the city, one of the first improved roads established in the county, had been improved to some extent, and was passable most of the time, toll was charged, and one of these old toll houses, torn down some 20 years ago, stood on the north side of Washington Ave. almost opposite the gate leading into the Washington C. H. Cemetery.

A SECOND toll gate was located immediately west of Washington C. H. on the north side of the highway and about 100 yards east of the drive leading into the home of Mrs. Will Henkle.

A third toll house stood on Leesburg Ave. about opposite the intersection of Green St., but it was torn away nearly three quarters of a century ago.

During the famous "crusade of praying women" which closed every saloon and liquor place in the city back in 1873 - 74, the women, engaged in constant prayer around a distillery located near the old toll gate house on Leesburg Ave., sought shelter in the vacant toll house after suffering greatly from exposure in a shed nearby.

Men supporting the women in their heroic effort to rid the community of liquor, placed a stove in the house to keep the women warm during the bitter winter weather.

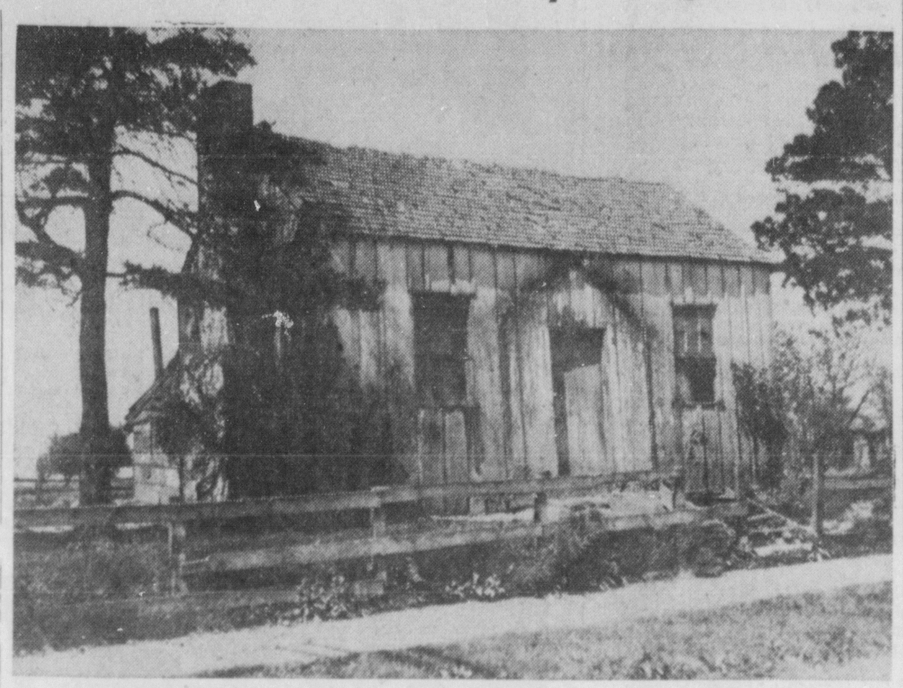
MRS. MAX G. DICE, in recalling information about the toll house on Leesburg Ave., said she had unconfirmed reports that a fourth toll house and gate were located on the Chillicothe Rd., south of the city.

The toll gates maintained across the highway at these places consisted of long poles filled with sharp pikes to prevent horsemen from jumping their horses over the barrier to escape paying toll. When toll was paid the barrier was turned aside. Hence "turnpike roads."

Only a few cents toll was charged in most instances, and this was used to pay for the cost of improving the roads and for their upkeep.

These stage coach lines were maintained until about the time the first railroad was built through the county— the present Pennsylvania, RR. around 1852.

One of the last stage coaches using the route through the county figured in a wreck and was partly burned on U. S. 22 west near where Mt. Olive Church is now located O. O. Bush who lives in that community, has one of the bells which was attached to some part of the old coach.



LAST REMINDER of Toll Gate Days in Fayette County was this old gate house, which stood north of Washington Ave., almost opposite the cemetery gate. It was torn away 20 years ago, and the area is now covered with residences. The old pine trees apparently were set out about the time the toll house was built. Originally the house was covered with clapboards. Rates of toll were posted on the walls of the toll house.

Milkmen Sleep In, Lead 'Normal Lives'

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—Milkmen here are a little more sure of their footing, and maybe a little less quiet, these days.

The city's major dairies have agreed to make their morning deliveries after sun-up.

They say they want their employes to lead more normal lives, and that modern refrigerations has all but eliminated the need for predawn deliveries.

Makeover Tricks Pay Invaluable Dividends

By DOROTHY ROE

HUSBANDS MAY not agree, but it's a fact that most women are pretty thrifty.

When Mom turns up with a new hat, chances are she's earned it. By her own brand of feminine accounting, the hat probably cost her nothing, for she has saved so much money by mending and making over the family's clothes that she can afford to splurge.

This, of course, is strictly woman's logic and few men can understand feminine methods of budget juggling.

Makeover tricks are among the most popular methods of stretching the household budget, and here are a few suggestions from local sewing center experts.

MEN'S SHIRTS offer many possibilities. As a rule, the collar wears out long before the body of the shirt. After Dad has decided a shirt is ready for the rag bag, Mom can find many uses for it.

By trimming off the collar and tail and cutting the sleeves, she has the basis for a number of garments. The blouson, for instance, is in fashion now and requires only a casing and drawstring or elastic at the bottom of the shirt.

Rickrack or bias tape may be applied around the sleeves and neckline for a trim finish.

By letting the shirt hang loose, with perhaps a little added decoration, she has a practical maternity blouse. By cutting a scoop neck and chopping the tail to hipbone length, she has a blouse to wear with skirts or slacks.

She can merely cut off the collar and shorten the sleeves of an old shirt, add lace or rick-rack trimming down the front and at sleeves and neckline, and have a gay shorty nightgown.

BY CUTTING the shirt apart entirely, she will have ample fabric for a child's sunsuit or smock.

Mom's own blouses often wear out first in the underarm area, but they can still be salvaged.

The simplest trick is merely to cut out the sleeves, and have a sleeveless blouse. Or the collar and front yoke can be used for a dickey to wear under an open-necked dress or sweater.

A dress is seldom completely worn out. Often the skirt may be cut off and teamed with a contrasting top to make a new outfit. With a waistband added, it becomes a separate skirt.

In the case of a wool dress, a smart trick is to cut it apart to make a separate skirt and use scraps from the worn bodice to trim a sweater, making a handsome skirt-and-sweater costume.

IF THE SKIRT is worn and the bodice is good, a separate blouse or jerkin may be made. If the underarm area of a dress is worn, cut off the sleeves and have a jumper.

If it is a cotton dress, she can cut out the sleeves, deepen the neck line and have a sun dress.

When all else fails, there almost always is enough good fabric left to make an apron.

When Dad's suits start getting too tight for him, Mom can have a field day making the trousers over into slacks or Bermuda shorts for herself or the girls of the family. There also is enough material in a pair of men's trousers to make a smart straight skirt.

As for the coat of the old suit, it may be made into such things as vests or jerkins to wear with the matching slacks, shorts or skirt.

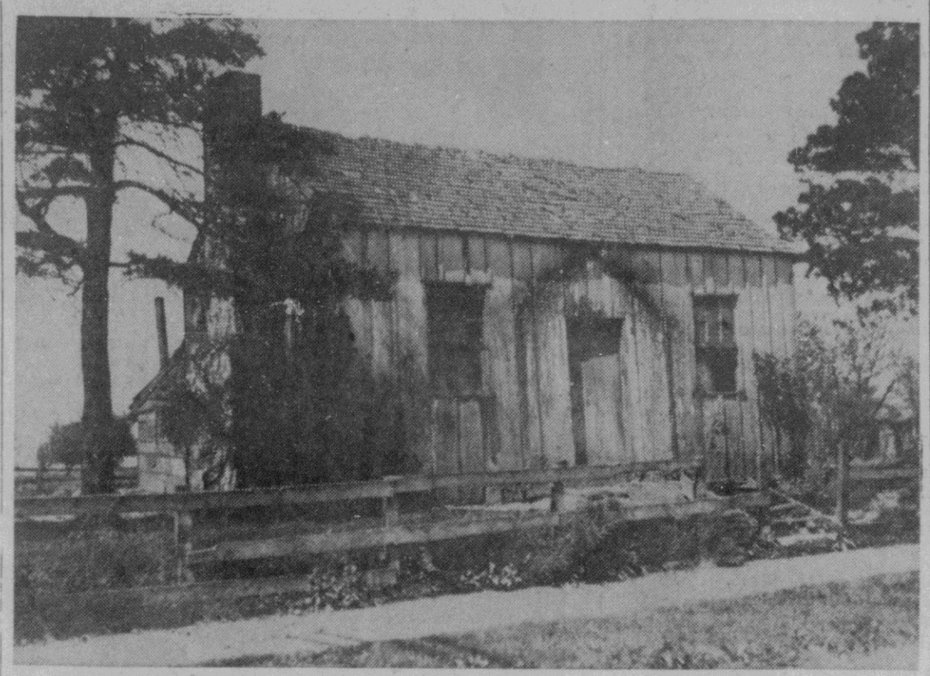
MRS. MAX G. DICE, in recalling information about the toll house on Leesburg Ave., said she had unconfirmed reports that a fourth toll house and gate were located on the Chillicothe Rd., south of the city.

The toll gates maintained across the highway at these places consisted of long poles filled with sharp pikes to prevent horsemen from jumping their horses over the barrier to escape paying toll. When toll was paid the barrier was turned aside. Hence "turnpike roads."

Only a few cents toll was charged in most instances, and this was used to pay for the cost of improving the roads and for their upkeep.

These stage coach lines were maintained until about the time the first railroad was built through the county— the present Pennsylvania, RR. around 1852.

One of the last stage coaches using the route through the county figured in a wreck and was partly burned on U. S. 22 west near where Mt. Olive Church is now located O. O. Bush who lives in that community, has one of the bells which was attached to some part of the old coach.



LAST REMINDER of Toll Gate Days in Fayette County was this old gate house, which stood north of Washington Ave., almost opposite the cemetery gate. It was torn away 20 years ago, and the area is now covered with residences. The old pine trees apparently were set out about the time the toll house was built. Originally the house was covered with clapboards. Rates of toll were posted on the walls of the toll house.

Tonsil Operations By the Half Dozen

LAWTON, Okla. (AP)—Officials of Southwest Hospital here believe they have set a record of some sort. Six brothers and sisters, ranging in age from 5 to 14, had their tonsils and adenoids taken out on the same day.

The six children of Mrs Jean Grace of Lawton are Virginia, 14, Howard Earl, 13; Eugene, 11; Helen, 9; Harold, 7, and Heth, 5 They were described as model patients.

Milkmen Sleep In, Lead 'Normal Lives'

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP)—Milkmen here are a little more sure of their footing, and maybe a little less quiet, these days.

The city's major dairies have agreed to make their morning deliveries after sun-up.

They say they want their employes to lead more normal lives, and that modern refrigerations has all but eliminated the need for predawn deliveries.

Makeover Tricks Pay Invaluable Dividends

By DOROTHY ROE

HUSBANDS MAY not agree, but it's a fact that most women are pretty thrifty.

When Mom turns up with a new hat, chances are she's earned it. By her own brand of feminine accounting, the hat probably cost her nothing, for she has saved so much money by mending and making over the family's clothes that she can afford to splurge.

This, of course, is strictly woman's logic and few men can understand feminine methods of budget juggling.

Makeover tricks are among the most popular methods of stretching the household budget, and here are a few suggestions from local sewing center experts.

MEN'S SHIRTS offer many possibilities. As a rule, the collar wears out long before the body of the shirt. After Dad has decided a shirt is ready for the rag bag, Mom can find many uses for it.

By trimming off the collar and tail and cutting the sleeves, she has the basis for a number of garments. The blouson, for instance, is in fashion now and requires only a casing and drawstring or elastic at the bottom of the shirt.

Rickrack or bias tape may be applied around the sleeves and neckline for a trim finish.

By letting the shirt hang loose, with perhaps a little added decoration, she has a practical maternity blouse. By cutting a scoop neck and chopping the tail to hipbone length, she has a blouse to wear with skirts or slacks.

She can merely cut off the collar and shorten the sleeves of an old shirt, add lace or rick-rack trimming down the front and at sleeves and neckline, and have a gay shorty nightgown.

BY CUTTING the shirt apart entirely, she will have ample fabric for a child's sunsuit or smock.

Mom's own blouses often wear out first in the underarm area, but they can still be salvaged.

The simplest trick is merely to cut out the sleeves, and have a sleeveless blouse. Or the collar and front yoke can be used for a dickey to wear under an open-necked dress or sweater.

A dress is seldom completely worn out. Often the skirt may be cut off and teamed with a contrasting top to make a new outfit. With a waistband added, it becomes a separate skirt.

In the case of a wool dress, a smart trick is to cut it apart to make a separate skirt and use scraps from the worn bodice to trim a sweater, making a handsome skirt-and-sweater costume.

IF THE SKIRT is worn and the bodice is good, a separate blouse or jerkin may be made. If the underarm area of a dress is worn, cut off the sleeves and have a jumper.

If it is a cotton dress, she can cut out the sleeves, deepen the neck line and have a sun dress.

When all else fails, there almost always is enough good fabric left to make an apron.

When Dad's suits start getting too tight for him, Mom can have a field day making the trousers over into slacks or Bermuda shorts for herself or the girls of the family. There also is enough material in a pair of men's trousers to make a smart straight skirt.

As for the coat of the old suit, it may be made into such things as vests or jerkins to wear with the matching slacks, shorts or skirt.

Christ in Christmas

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Junior Chamber of Commerce here started a movement this year to "Put Christ Back in Christmas." Several Jaycees have written articles giving their views on the movement. Some of them will be published in the Record-Herald before Christmas.)

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring another new drive. One would think that there were enough drives going on in Washington C. H. without adding another.

But wait — this is a unique drive —unique in that the people who benefit most from this drive are the participants. This drive has another unique aspect — You are the chairman of this drive.

Most drives are headed by a chairman and vice chairmen who are responsible for the workers, all of whom work for the benefit of others, and sometimes the benefits are for unknown persons. But here, You are the chairman; You are the principle solicitor; and You reap the greatest share of the benefits. This unique drive is to "Put Christ Back in Christmas."

How do we put Christ back into Christmas? This is, to a great extent, a personal matter. The best place to start, perhaps, is to find one hour of time when we can get away by ourselves, one hour of uninterrupted peace and quiet. This hour should be used to think and reflect upon the true meaning and purpose of Christmas Day.

Why do we celebrate December 25 each year? What is the difference between the birthday of Christ and our own birthday? What is meant by the true spirit of Christmas? Why is December 25 so important to the Christian world? One hour of reflection on these and other questions pertaining to the true meaning of Christmas should place all of us back on the track to "Put Christ Back in Christmas."

December and the holiday season is a wonderful time to attend church. Hearing the Christmas message in the proper setting and watching the children at Sunday school always tends to put Christmas into the proper perspective. If Christmas is viewed in the right setting, Christ is already in Christmas.

Christmas music helps to put Christ into Christmas. Listening to the Messiah or Christmas music on the pipe organ will induce you to sing some of the beautiful Christmas carols and help you to "Put Christ Back in Christmas."

The benefits to be harvested from this drive to "Put Christ Back in Christmas" are legion. The greatest benefit, undoubtedly, would be our better understanding and appreciation of Christmas and the holiday season. This better understanding would be reflected in our speech and facial expression every time we greeted our fellow man with a "Merry Christmas" or a "Happy New Year."

Putting Christ Back in Christmas would aid the world peace movement. "Peace on Earth and Good Will Toward Men" spoken sincerely by enough men and women who meant what they said could turn world peace dreams into a reality. This alone is enough reason to try to put Christ back into Christmas.

JOIN OUR DRIVE. Find an hour for yourself; attend church; listen to the beautiful Christmas music and sing the carols. If you will but do these few things, you can make this a better world for you and me by putting Christ back into Christmas.

Christmas Idea Caught Attention Of the President

By ART CROCKETT
Central Press Association Correspondent

IN 1955 when Frank B. Sohl of Garden City, Long Island, wrote a poem called Christmas Eve on a Gettysburg Farm, he never dreamed it would touch the heart of President Eisenhower and millions of readers all over the world.

Sohl, president of Githens-Sohl, creative printers in New York City, used the arts and crafts of his business to print his poem on an attractive Christmas card of his own design.

On an impulse, and against the advice of friends who insisted the President's mail at Christmas was far too heavy for him to consider Sohl's efforts, he sent the poem of 22 stanzas to the White House.

The gesture made Frank B. Sohl internationally famous.

His immediate reward was a personal thank you note from President Eisenhower. A few days later it was followed by a note from the President's personal secretary, Mrs. Ann Whitman, who asked the author for a dozen copies to fill requests she received from friends of the President.

Newspapers picked up the story and wire services, naming Sohl as Ike's poet, sent the poem all over the world. Thousands of letters poured into Sohl's home requesting copies or asking his permission to read the poem at schools, dinners, meetings, from pulpits and over radio and television broadcasts.

Christmas Eve on a Gettysburg Farm

By Frank B. Sohl

The President's chores were quite over,
His gifts were arranged 'neath the tree,
And in favorite robe and soft slippers,
From matters of State he was free.

In his favorite chair by the fire,
Slouched deep in each comforting arm,
With a sigh of contentment he murmured:
"Our first Christmas Eve on the farm."

Outside, while a light snow was falling,
Lights in windows blinked out, one by one,
A signal that families were ready
To welcome the birth of God's Son.

As the clock on the mantel struck midnight,
The lights in the study grew strange.
The President stared, as a figure,
Familiar to him, came in range.

Bewigged and beruffled he stood there,
His hands raised in friendly command.
From out of the past—an immortal,
Father of our beloved land.

The President jumped to attention,
But Washington shook his white hair.
"Remember, we both rank the same, sir,"
He laughed as he pulled up a chair.

"My visit, tonight, may surprise you,
But my soul couldn't rest 'til I say,
You could be the man who is destined
To plan a PEACE which will stay.

"When I lived I fathered an ideal
Of Government for good of all,
And I've tossed in my grave since my funeral
As Dictatorships fumble and fall.

"We both know the horrors of warfare
And the promise that Peace always brings,
If all parties can reach an agreement
Without faithless, entangling strings.

"I'll leave now, my mission is ended,
I just couldn't rest 'til you knew:
'Peace on Earth and Good Will' need a leader,
And God may have chosen you."

Just as he came, he vanished,
A mission so strange—yet so real.
In his place came a new apparition,
Tall, gaunt, and with homespun appeal.

"Do you mind if I visit, Mr. President?"
He asked as he threw off his shawl,
"Since my speech here they've made many changes."
As he sat down he still seemed so tall.

"I've come for a special purpose,
And hope you will hear me through,
For you've captured the hearts of all nations,
Lasting Peace could depend on you.

"Ninety years have not changed my high purpose:
'Malice toward none . . . Charity for all.'
With God's help may you be most successful
In preventing World Atomic fall."

Mr. Lincoln then picked up his top hat
And carefully tucked in his shawl.
He disappeared into the shadows
As if walking straight through the wall.

The President stirred as if restless
And shifted around in his chair,
For a new and familiar vision
Was sharing the room with him there.

"Forgive this late hour, Mr. President,
And my unannounced call on you here.
But the prayers of all mankind are for you,
Counting on you has freed them of fear.

"That's why I came here this Christmas
To re-state my aims when alive:
That our Nation should serve all humanity,
And for Peace may we always strive.

"I hoped for a League of Nations,
But the World would not keep it alive.
Today your United Nations
Has a much better chance to survive.

"I failed, Congress wasn't united.
You can't lose . . . you've the World in your palm.
May God let you remain in the struggle

With a hand on the President's shoulder,
Mr. Wilson prepared to depart,
As he disappeared into the shadows
. . . the President 'woke with a start.

"It's Merry Christmas, Mr. President,
And it's time you were in your bed,"
Said his wife as she tenderly kissed him,
While he drowsily scratched at his head.

Snow Time Like the Present

By FRANK KUCHIRCHUK
Central Press Staff Photographer-Writer

MOST FOLKS dread the thought of coming winter, but not the ski enthusiasts who look forward to skimming through the powder at some snowy wonderland.

What's more, the idea is really catching.

During weekends ski areas are jammed. Now even the weekdays are beginning to fill up as more and more take winter vacations. While the main attraction is skiing itself, many non-skiers go on the weekend trips for the fun and companionship that prevail.

Then, of course, there is the attraction of the white slopes nestled among the pine and birch, the crinkle of frosty snow under the ski-boots, the smell of wax on the skis themselves, the feel of numbness on the pink-lined faces and finally an eggnog and beef dinner. Then a rest before the fireplace burning with pine logs that fill the nostrils with their aroma.

In addition, there is an obvious health and therapeutic value in skiing.

Wherever there is snow for a considerable part of the winter, a ski resort may be found. Originally developed and operated by private concerns, more and more states, as well as Canadian provinces, now are using their facilities as well as cash to build these recreational areas for the taxpayer.

Even areas with limited hills are getting into the act. Nightfall doesn't halt the skiers, either. As the one picture shows, they're even doing the Christie under the lights.

Expert Offers to Tell Men All About Women

By EDWARD S. KITCH

CHICAGO (AP) — Men, if you want to know why women act the way they do, listen to Susan M. Rogers.

She obtained her facts about women during two years of research for three books about women. One due soon is titled "The Fine Art of Supervising Women."

"Let's face it," Miss Rogers says, "men are afraid of women. We are the unsolved equation as far as men are concerned. It used to be that a woman was the homebody and the man ran the whole show. Now he asks: 'Please, may I go out with the boys?' The reason is that the matriarchal tendency among women is stronger today."

"SHE MAY WANT to be the brainy one because it means security. She may feel insecure in her emotions because of a shaky love life. She may think finance is the key to security. She may be a social climber and believe that unless she is on the social register she is destitute.

"A woman," says Miss Rogers, "is given to fantasy. She identifies herself with everything she sees. It may be a heroine in a play or a wife in trouble in a soap opera. It may be a new hat she saw in a store window or a new chair in a furniture shop.

"She constantly is cramming her mind with experiences, either actually or vicariously received to establish an emotional and mental bank account for use at some future time. She withdraws these valuable nuggets of fantasy like money from a bank as her emotions dictate."

Intutition?

"I am the greatest believer in the world in a woman's intuition. It is absolutely unbelievable," she says. "Women go by inner perception.

"Another basic thing about woman, besides sex pride and security, is that she doesn't have to feel glamorous as long as she feels she is needed.

"THIS IS THE reason an advertisement will say, 'You are the very air he breathes.' She thus associates soap and cosmetics as a need."

Miss Rogers says she champions the working girl. But the career girls are another matter.

"I question a woman who does not have the fundamental instinct as a homemaker," she says. "The 100 per cent career women who cuts herself off from vital forces of life is lopsided — mentally and emotionally.

"If she has a man in her life it makes a big difference in her thinking process. The career woman bent on having the best may achieve success, but she will never be a woman."

ANOTHER THING that worries men is how to criticize women without a blow-up. How can this be overcome? Says Miss Rogers:

"Go around the back door. Praise her first. Say, 'Why, dearie, how did you do this? It's wonderful!' "

Any more questions, men?

Blind Pennsylvanian Success Selling Cars He Can't Drive

By JANE JOHNSON
Central Press Assn.

UPPER DARBY, Pa. — A blind automobile salesman: Impossible? Not only possible, but an actual fact—just another example of man overcoming a great handicap.

Tony D'Amico reports to his job each morning at an auto agency here in Upper Darby, Pa., a large Philadelphia suburb of 90,000 residents. He is accompanied by Velda, his seeing-eye dog. Together they comprise a mighty forceful sales team.

Tony contacts his customers by telephone and engages them in a skilled sales talk. His friendly confident voice makes the approach. He cannot read or see the product, but he certainly knows his cars. His excellent memory absorbs latest features that he has had read to him.

D'Amico has a price list transcribed in Braille, and he can quote a price without hesitation. He finds out the kind of car the customer would like to see (model, color, body style, extras) and makes the appointment.

THE CUSTOMER, when greeted by a short, stocky man with a gentle seeing-eye dog is often taken aback, but Tony's warm handshake and thorough knowledge soon put him at ease. The car is the point of discussion, not Tony's handicap.

Soon, the customer, accompanied by Tony and Velda, goes for a demonstration ride. "Then," smiles the blind man, "Velda sells the car."

He explained that the customer never fails to be impressed by the large German shepherd curled up and relaxed in the car.

TONY, BLIND since the age of five, is married and has a 3-year-old son, Johnny. his wife, Lillian, has partial sight but cannot see to read or write. The son has normal sight.

D'Amico graduated from the Overbrook School for the Blind in Philadelphia, and during World War II was trained as an aircraft machinist. He also worked with blinded servicemen at Philadelphia Naval hospital, teaching occupational therapy.

Tony later graduated from the University of Pennsylvania where he studied public relations and personal policies, a valuable aid in his present occupation.

Musical, he plays the piano, organ and accordion. He once had a 12-piece dance band. An active man, Tony works with the Middle Atlantic Blind Golf association, presently serving on the membership committee.

He is an enthusiastic "ham" radio operator; his call letters are W3TXE. He operates on 10 meters at the present, but hopes someday to own a bigger set.

Snow Time Like the Present

By FRANK KUCHIRCHUK
Central Press Staff Photographer-Writer

MOST FOLKS dread the thought of coming winter, but not the ski enthusiasts who look forward to skimming through the powder at some snowy wonderland.

What's more, the idea is really catching.

During weekends ski areas are jammed. Now even the weekdays are beginning to fill up as more and more take winter vacations. While the main attraction is skiing itself, many non-skiers go on the weekend trips for the fun and companionship that prevail.

Then, of course, there is the attraction of the white slopes nestled among the pine and birch, the crinkle of frosty snow under the ski-boots, the smell of wax on the skis themselves, the feel of numbness on the pink-lined faces and finally an eggnog and beef dinner. Then a rest before the fireplace burning with pine logs that fill the nostrils with their aroma.

In addition, there is an obvious health and therapeutic value in skiing.

Wherever there is snow for a considerable part of the winter, a ski resort may be found. Originally developed and operated by private concerns, more and more states, as well as Canadian provinces, now are using their facilities as well as cash to build these recreational areas for the taxpayer.

Expert Offers to Tell Men All About Women

By EDWARD S. KITCH

CHICAGO (AP) — Men, if you want to know why women act the way they do, listen to Susan M. Rogers.

She obtained her facts about women during two years of research for three books about women. One due soon is titled "The Fine Art of Supervising Women."

"Let's face it," Miss Rogers says, "men are afraid of women. We are the unsolved equation as far as men are concerned. It used to be that a woman was the homebody and the man ran the whole show. Now he asks: 'Please, may I go out with the boys?' The reason is that the matriarchal tendency among women is stronger today."

"SHE MAY WANT to be the brainy one because it means security. She may feel insecure in her emotions because of a shaky love life. She may think finance is the key to security. She may be a social climber and believe that unless she is on the social register she is destitute.

"A woman," says Miss Rogers, "is given to fantasy. She identifies herself with everything she sees. It may be a heroine in a play or a wife in trouble in a soap opera. It may be a new hat she saw in a store window or a new chair in a furniture shop.

Santa Has Many Names Throughout the World

By RAYMOND WILCOVE
Central Press Assn.

WASHINGTON — The time has come once more when youngsters ask, "Is there a Santa Claus?"

We leave it to parents to devise their own answers to this intriguing question, but this can be said with certainty, there WAS a Santa Claus and his name was St. Nicholas. He lived in Turkey and he is buried in Italy.

If this is somewhat confusing, it's no more so than the manner in which the patron saint of Christmas is known and regarded in countries all over the globe. In many of them Santa is unknown, but there are adequate substitutes, so the children don't really mind.

In England, the old gent with the beard is known as Father Christmas; in Holland, he's Saint Nikolaas; in France, he's Pete Noel; in Finaland, he's Wainomoinen, in Denmark, he's Jule Nisen; in Sweden, he's a dwarf known as Tomte; and in the Soviet Union he's called Grandfather Frost, or Dyed Moroz, in Russian. There's even a Russian version of The Night Before Christmas.

IT GOES like this:

"So Grandfather Frost goes forth
To each town and collective farm.
He knocks on the window of a house
And there all is dark.
The little child lies in his bed
As if he did not want to get up.
Who is it?

Open. It is I — Grandfather Frost.
I brought you a horse
And a rifle on a strap.
Open quickly to me!
Thus goes forth Grandfather Frost
To each town and to each collective farm.
On this night of New Year's Eve
He brings presents to every one."

THE DUTCH brought Santa Claus to America. They brought him to their colony of New Amsterdam, which later became New York. They called him Saint Nikolaas, but he finally became known in English as Santa Claus

Christmas has had a checkered career. Once, it was even abolished.

The British parliament outlawed its observance in 1644 but the ban didn't stick.

In Russia, where the Communists don't look with favor on religious observances, Grandfather Frost was for many years, in the days of the Russian monarchy, the patron saint "of all the Russias."

IN AUSTRIA, Santa Claus is accompanied on his travels by a companion, none other than the devil himself who, strangely enough is called at times "Old Nick."

Santa carries a bagful of goodies for the worthy children, but for those who have been naughty, Santa's companion has nothing but a red tongue, and horns and spiked tail.

In certain countries, notably Mexico and Puerto Rico, children expect their presents on Jan. 6, not Christmas, for it is on Epiphany that the Three Wise Men come bearing gifts.

In Colombia, merrymakers dance in masquerade through the streets on Christmas Eve. Whenever a friend recognizes another's identity, he claims a gift as a reward.

Latin America, incidentally, has contributed to the North American Yuletide the traditional Christmas decoration, the Poinsettia. The shrub with the flaming-red bracts was brought to the United States in 1829 by Dr. Joel Roberts Poinsett, a minister to Mexico, and now bears his name.

College Education Costs Are Going Up

COLUMBUS — It's going to cost between $1,500 and $2,000 to send Junior to college next year, according to estimates of Ohio State University extension specialists.

They predict expenditures of a full time undergraduate in a public college will be about $1,500 and in private colleges, $2,000. Those are "average" figures, the specialists point out. Individual students may spend far less or far more.

The 1958 cost estimates represents an increase over four years ago of about 34 per cent for tax-supported schools and 19 per cent for private colleges.

The cost of going to college varies, the specialists say, by class level of student, sex, location of college, type of college, field of study and living arrangements. Costs go up for juniors and seniors. Boys spend an average of $100 a year more than girls.

Public junior and teachers colleges are the least expensive, private junior colleges and universities the most expensive.

Students majoring in the humanities (art, music, English and related studies) spend the most and those in education spend the least. Between those, in decending order, are social science, engineering, biological science, medicine, physical science and agriculture.

West Virginia Basking after Tripping Kings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While West Virginia, the giant killer of the year basks in its glory, a dozen important holiday basketball tournaments get under way after Christmas.

In one—the Dixie Classic at Raleigh, N. C.—North Carolina will try to pick up the pieces after seeing its 37-game streak shattered by West Virginia 75-64 in the final of the Kentucky Invitational Tournament Saturday.

This was perhaps the biggest victory for Mountaineer Coach Fred Schaus since he took over at West Virginia little more than three seasons ago.

His next aim is to carry the Southern Conference banner past the first round of the NCAA Championships, something he has failed to do three times. The Mountaineers have won 26 straight league games and their steady beatings in the first round of the NCAA tournament have been a sore spot with Schaus.

Another tournament which could wind up co atching two of the goliaths of the country is the Big Eight, which also starts Thursday at Kansas City. Kansas and Kansas State are the favorites to go through to the final.

Here are the 12 major tournaments and the teams involved:

Opening Thursday:

Dixie Classic at Raleigh, N. C.—Wake Forest vs. Duquesne, North Carolina State vs. Northwestern, Duke vs. Seton Hall, North Carolina vs. St. Louis.

Big Eight Tournament at Kansas City—Kansas vs. Oklahoma, Colorado vs. Iowa State, Kansas State vs. Missouri, Nebraska vs. Princeton.

Opening Friday:

Richmond Invitational — Richmond vs. Penn, Virginia vs. La Salle.

Queen City Tournament at Buffalo—Iowa, Cornell, Syracuse, Canisius.

Former WHS Athlete On AFA Hockey Team

Dick Tracey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron A. Tracey, 808 Washington Ave., played a lot of football and basketball with the Lions of Washington C. H. High School before his graduation in 1954, but he's gone in for soccer since becoming a cadet in the new Air Force Academy at Denver — and has been doing all right at it.

The Air Force team, undefeated in 10 games, has won eight and tied two. Tracey has scored two goals and gave assists in the scoring of two others. Opponents have been college teams in that area.

Finsterwald Collects Boca Raton Tourney

Finsterwald, 28, a native of Athens, Ohio, had a 35 outbound and a 31 coming in, built on birdies on the second, fifth, 12th and 13th holes.

Sam Snead finished a stroke behind Finsterwald. He was in line to win but he blew a seven-foot putt on the 17th and a three-footer on the 18th.

Glue is important. If all the glue turned to dust, says the National Geographic Society, countless objects from plains to supersonic planes would fall apart.

Paul Brown Expects Lions To Stay 'Hot'

CLEVELAND (AP) — Coach Paul Brown expects to meet a charged up Detroit Lions squad when he sends his Cleveland Browns into next Sunday's championship battle in Detroit's Briggs Stadium.

The Lions were mauled by San Francisco's 49ers in the first half of Sunday's playoff game at San Francisco. Behind 27-7 in the third quarter, Detroit suddenly came alive and scored three touchdowns and a field goal to win the Western Division title, 31-27, and a chance at the Browns.

"The Lions probably will keep that momentum and will come into next Sunday's game really roaring," Brown predicted. Cleveland, winner of the Eastern Division title, was idle last week.

Detroit defeated the Browns in a regular season contest, 20-7, after splitting two exhibition games this year. Next Sunday's game will be the fourth time the two teams have met for the National Football League championship since the Browns joined the circuit in 1950.

Detroit won the first two contests, defeating Cleveland 17-7 in 1952 and 17-16 in 1953. The Browns captured the 1954 championship by walloping the Lions, 56-10.

In their many meetings, however, Cleveland never has won a game in Briggs Stadium. The Browns started work today toward upsetting that jinx.

Jeff Cagers Edged In Chillicothe Game

Only one of the four Fayette County high school cage teams will be in action— except for practice — again this year. The other three will not resume competition until 1958.

Jeffersonville's Tigers, who lost 76 to 65 to a high - scoring outfit at Chillicothe Catholic Saturday night, will play in the tournament at Jamestown Dec. 27 and 28. They open the tourney with a game with Cedarville at 7 p. m.

In Saturday night's game at Chillicothe, the Tigers, who have won six and lost four, got their offense rolling fast enough to win most games, but were unable to stop the sharpshooting Chillicotheans.

Chillicothe: Taylor 3, Krauser 36, Schneider 14, Stark 9, Straubaugh 6 and Hunter 8.

The Jeffersonville reserves lost the preliminary, 40 to 36.

Two of the other three Fayette County teams will take the floor again Jan. 3 with the Madison Mills Warriors at Chillicothe and New Holland's Bulldogs at Bloomingburg.

The fourth team, Good Hope's Mad Anthonys, won't play again until Jan. 7, when they go to Jackson Township.

Rote Is Sure Of Victory

Lions Field General Itching for Playoff

"Sure, why not," said Lion quarterback Tobin Rote. He had just engineered a 31-27 comeback victory for his club over the San Francisco 49ers Sunday in their playoff for the Western Conference title.

"The Browns are always rough," said Detroit Coach George Wilson with more caution. Then he added, "We beat them on Dec. 8 (20-7) and we're hoping to do it again." They'll meet in Detroit.

The 49ers built up a 27-7 lead against the Lions with 2 minutes and 22 seconds gone in the third quarter only to falter and fail.

San Francisco quarterback Y.A. Tittle pitched touchdown passes of 34 yards to R. C. Owens, 47 to Hugh McElhenny and 12 to Billy Wilson. Gordy Soltau added three conversions and two field goals, of 25 and 10 yards.

Then the Lions roared back. Tittle fumbled and Bob Long recovered at the San Francisco 27. With fourth down at the 20, Rote passed complete to Hopalong Cassady at the 6. Two plays later Tom Tracy boomed over from the 1.

Less than two minutes later, Tracy, a 210-pound reserve fullback playing for the injured John Henry Johnson, raced 59 yards to score. Jim Martin's conversion made it 27-21.

On the last play of the third period, Rote hit end Steve Junker for a 37-yard gain to the 15. Tracy crashed for 10, Rote for 3 and Gene Gedman scored, Martin converted and Detroit led for the first time 28-27.

Pro Cage Scoring Record Shattered

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were six games last weekend with a total of 1,430 points being scored over-all. Tops on the list was the St. Louis Hawks' record-breaking 146-136 victory over Syracuse Saturday night. This broke the Boston Celts record of 142 points in one game.

Sunday, the Hawks grabbed a 123-115 win over Minneapolis. Other games found the New York Knicks beating the Philly Warriors, 126-100, the Boston Celtics winning over the Cincinnati Royals 115-98 and the Syracuse Nats whipping Detroit 119-93.

U. S. Net Hopes Hinge on Seixas

MELBOURNE (AP)—It's Vic Seixas against Australia in the Davis Cup challenge round starting Thursday in the opinion of Harry Hopman, non-playing captain of the Aussies.

"You have to say Vic is the key to the United States' chances," the veteran Australian leader said as he conceded the American ace has a 50-50 chance of winning his two singles tests.

"He is experienced in Davis Cup play," Hopman added. "And he's a tenacious fighter who apparently is in good shape. I figure he is the only man who can win points for America."

Bob Zuppke, Great Football Coach at Illinois, Is Dead

Affectionately known as "Little Dutchman," Zuppke died Sunday at the age of 78 in Cole Memorial Hospital. Cause of death was prostatic cancer, complicated by high blood pressure and a long-standing heart ailment. He suffered a serious stroke in 1955.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday.

Zuppke, who retired in 1941 after 29 years as Illinois' football coach, was given little hope during the past week when his health began failing rapidly.

Zuppke was known as the master of the upset. He produced seven Big Ten titles for Illinois and his teams won 131 games, lost 80 and tied 12.

One of his first big upsets was a 14-9 triumph over a great Minnesota team in 1916. In 1924, he surprised Michigan 39-14. Red Grange, Zuppke's most famous pupil, scored five touchdowns, four in the first quarter, in that game. Probably the last to be remembered was the 13-9 victory over Michigan in 1939 when the Wolverines were riding high with Tom Harmon and Forest Evashevski.

Fritz Crisler, Michigan's athletic director who coached the 1939 Wolverines, said Zuppke was "the coach I most dreaded to meet on the playing field. He was inventive and resourceful and you never knew what he was going to do."

Other coaches throughout the country joined in calling him one of the great college coaches of all time.

After his retirement, Zuppke turned to farming and his hobby of painting. For a while he served as an advisory coach to the Chicago Bears but had to give it up because of ill health. His time in the final years was spent between his apartment in Champaign and his summer home in Muskegon, Mich., where his coaching career began on the high school level in 1905.

He went to the University of Wisconsin where he won a freshman numeral in football but he never did succeed in winning a varsity letter.

Thirty-two years after his graduation he returned to Wisconsin and was awarded his "W" at a banquet observing his 25 years as coach at Illinois.

Sharp-tongued and quick of wit, his sayings through the years became known as Zuppkeisms. Some of his observations included:

"Good losers. I don't like 'em. Show me a team of singers about a defeat and I'll show you a team of punks. I want bad losers.

"If you are too old to play, you try to coach.

"Often an All-American is made by a long run, a weak defense and a poet in the press box.

Zuppke in 1956 married Leona P. Ray, who had been his housekeeper for 23 years. His first wife, Fanny Tillotson Erwin, died in 1936 at the age of 63. They were married in 1908 in Muskegon, and had no children.

Burdette Voted Top Athlete in Wisconsin

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lew Burdette, pitching star of the Milwaukee Braves World Series conquest, has been hailed as Wisconsin's outstanding athlete of 1957.

At his home in Sarasota, Fla., the lanky righthander Sunday said he was overwhelmed, and surprised that folks were still thrusting honors on him.

The latest tribute to his mound fete came when he was named in a Wisconsin Associated Press poll.

Johnson, Sharrer Get Top Tourney Honors

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Minnesota's Ron Johnson and Lloyd Sharrer of West Virginia received an equal number of votes for most valuable player in last weekend's Kentucky invitational tourney.

The other was Jerry West of champion West Virginia. Sharrer was also named, along with Pete Brennan of North Carolina and Vernon Hatton of Kentucky.

Waverly Tournament Next for Lion Cagers

The Lion cagers won't take to the hardwood for a game until Friday, when they go to Waverly for the holiday tournament, but that doesn't mean they won't see plenty of basketball between now and then. After being jolted with a 56-54 upset at Hillsboro, the Lions will be putting in a lot of time practicing for the tournament.

At Waverly, they will meet the boys from New Boston in their first game and will face mostly opponents they would not meet otherwise in succeeding games—if they survive the first one.

Two other Southcentral Ohio League teams will be playing Friday night, too. Greenfield's Tigers will be at Ironton and the Indians will entertain the cagers from Bournville.

Circleville's Tigers will go into action again Saturday night at Franklin Heights and on Jan. 3, Wilmington's Hurricane will play at Waverly.

As the SCO teams go into the brief holiday, three of them are deadlocked for the lead with two wins and one loss— Washington C. H., Hillsboro and Wilmington. Circleville, which has played only two league games, is fourth with one and one and Greenfield's Tigers are trailing with three defeats in a row.

North, South Drill For All-Star Game

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The North squad, rounding into shape for the Christmas night North - South Shrine All-Star college football game in the Orange Bowl, worked on kickoff and punt returns today while the South squad drilled on timing and passing.

Two Michigan State players were elected captains of the North team. Jim Ninowski, quarterback, will direct the offensive unit and Dan Currie, All-America center, will captain the team on defense.

Ohio College Cagers Await Holiday Tests

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The leaders in the Ohio and Mid-American basketball conferences go on out-of-state holiday trips this week while five of the state's cage teams will be in tournament play.

Two other teams will be on tour while Akron entertains Colby College of Maine Saturday for the only in-state non-tourney game of the week.

Tournament entries include Capital and Baldwin-Wallace at Terre Haute, Ind., Steubenville and Youngstown at Youngstown, and Dayton in New York.

The Terre Haute and Youngstown tourneys will be played Thursday through Saturday, while Dayton is scheduled to play Thursday, Saturday and next Monday in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) Holiday Festival. Dayton will have the best record among eight teams when it opens against Manhattan.

Winless Ohio State (0-4) is heading west to seek success. The Buckeyes play Oklahoma tonight, Southern California Friday and UCLA Saturday.

Cincinnati (6-0), which won two Missouri Valley games over the weekend, will meet Drake in another conference battle in Des Moines, Iowa, Saturday.

In other games, Wittenberg, the Ohio Conference leader, goes to New Rochelle, N. Y., Saturday to play Iona, and Miami, Mid-American Conference pace-setter, takes on Illinois the same day.

Ohio State Working Out Like Underdog Contestant

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Ohio State's Big Ten champions; 19-points favorites to defeat Oregon in the Rose Bowl game New Years Day, are working as if they were 19-point underdogs.

A pair of two-hour practice sessions were on tap today for coach Woody Hayes' stalwarts and the same menu for Tuesday. The 44-man squad thought Sunday was to be a day of fun and frolic but the players were sent through an hour's drill after a trip to Disneyland and Marineland.

Hayes threw away the usual script upon arrival here Saturday. He had the squad on the practice field as soon as it could be whisked from the Burbank airport to East Los Angeles Junior College, with no hotel stop in between.

Both teams were dinner guests of a Los Angeles night club Moulin Rouge, owned by Frank Sennes, formerly of Warren, Ohio) Saturday night. Both will visit movie studios later in the week.

The rest of the time will be spent polishing plays and defenses. The Webfoots had a picture taking session for news photographers Sunday and Casanova held the squad for an hour's workout after that.

Hayes, who ran into some caustic treatment at the hands of the West Coast press four years ago because of his outspoken tendencies, was friendliness personified in his first meetings with the writers. In fact, one coast columnist said a perfect Christmas gift for the Ohio mentor would be a record of Elvis Presley singing "Stay as Sweet as You Are."

Along with his intense practices, Hayes was taking no chances on running afoul of West Coast officiating. He hired two California whistle tooters, Jay Settle and Jim Tunney Jr., to keep an eagle eye on everyone in the workouts to detect anything which might be okay in the Big Ten but an infraction out here.

Hayes has set a 10 p. m. curfew for his players and said he would decide today whether future practices would be closed to the public and press. Casanova said all Webfoot workouts would be wide open.

Although Ohio has eight of its allotted 16 practice days left and Oregon nine, the rival coaches said they would not use them all since they plan no workouts Christmas day or next Sunday when the wives of the players arrive.

Of the two 44-man squads 15 on each are married. The Webfoot husbands have 10 children with co-captain and guard Harry Mondale being the father of three and tackles Darrel Aschbacher and Tom Keele two each. The Buckeye husbands have a total of five children.

West Virginia Basking after Tripping Kings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While West Virginia, the giant killer of the year basks in its glory, a dozen important holiday basketball tournaments get under way after Christmas.

In one—the Dixie Classic at Raleigh, N. C.—North Carolina will try to pick up the pieces after seeing its 37-game streak shattered by West Virginia 75-64 in the final of the Kentucky Invitational Tournament Saturday.

This was perhaps the biggest victory for Mountaineer Coach Fred Schaus since he took over at West Virginia little more than three seasons ago.

His next aim is to carry the Southern Conference banner past the first round of the NCAA Championships, something he has failed to do three times. The Mountaineers have won 26 straight league games and their steady beatings in the first round of the NCAA tournament have been a sore spot with Schaus.

Another tournament which could wind up co atching two of the goliaths of the country is the Big Eight, which also starts Thursday at Kansas City. Kansas and Kansas State are the favorites to go through to the final.

Here are the 12 major tournaments and the teams involved:

Opening Thursday:

Big Eight Tournament at Kansas City—Kansas vs. Oklahoma, Colorado vs. Iowa State, Kansas State vs. Missouri, Nebraska vs. Princeton.

Opening Friday:

Richmond Invitational — Richmond vs. Penn, Virginia vs. La Salle.

Queen City Tournament at Buffalo—Iowa, Cornell, Syracuse, Canisius.

High School before his graduation in 1954, but he's gone in for soccer since becoming a cadet in the new Air Force Academy at Denver — and has been doing all right at it.

The Air Force team, undefeated in 10 games, has won eight and tied two. Tracey has scored two goals and gave assists in the scoring of two others. Opponents have been college teams in that area.

Finsterwald Collects Boca Raton Tourney

Finsterwald, 28, a native of Athens, Ohio, had a 35 outbound and a 31 coming in, built on birdies on the second, fifth, 12th and 13th holes.

Sam Snead finished a stroke behind Finsterwald. He was in line to win but he blew a seven-foot putt on the 17th and a three-footer on the 18th.

Glue is important. If all the glue turned to dust, says the National Geographic Society, countless objects from plains to supersonic planes would fall apart.

Paul Brown Expects Lions To Stay 'Hot'

The Lions were mauled by San Francisco's 49ers in the first half of Sunday's playoff game at San Francisco. Behind 27-7 in the third quarter, Detroit suddenly came alive and scored three touchdowns and a field goal to win the Western Division title, 31-27, and a chance at the Browns.

"The Lions probably will keep that momentum and will come into next Sunday's game really roaring," Brown predicted. Cleveland, winner of the Eastern Division title, was idle last week.

Detroit defeated the Browns in a regular season contest, 20-7, after splitting two exhibition games this year. Next Sunday's game will be the fourth time the two teams have met for the National Football League championship since the Browns joined the circuit in 1950.

Detroit won the first two contests, defeating Cleveland 17-7 in 1952 and 17-16 in 1953. The Browns captured the 1954 championship by walloping the Lions, 56-10.

In their many meetings, however, Cleveland never has won a game in Briggs Stadium. The Browns started work today toward upsetting that jinx.

Jeff Cagers Edged In Chillicothe Game

Only one of the four Fayette County high school cage teams will be in action— except for practice — again this year. The other three will not resume competition until 1958.

Jeffersonville's Tigers, who lost 76 to 65 to a high - scoring outfit at Chillicothe Catholic Saturday night, will play in the tournament at Jamestown Dec. 27 and 28. They open the tourney with a game with Cedarville at 7 p. m.

In Saturday night's game at Chillicothe, the Tigers, who have won six and lost four, got their offense rolling fast enough to win most games, but were unable to stop the sharpshooting Chillicotheans.

Chillicothe: Taylor 3, Krauser 36, Schneider 14, Stark 9, Strausbaugh 6 and Hunter 8.

The Jeffersonville reserves lost the preliminary, 40 to 36.

Two of the other three Fayette County teams will take the floor again Jan. 3 with the Madison Mills Warriors at Chillicothe and New Holland's Bulldogs at Bloomingburg.

The fourth team, Good Hope's Mad Anthonys, won't play again until Jan. 7, when they go to Jackson Township.

"Sure, why not," said Lion quarterback Tobin Rote. He had just engineered a 31-27 comeback victory for his club over the San Francisco 49ers Sunday in their playoff for the Western Conference title.

"The Browns are always rough," said Detroit Coach George Wilson with more caution. Then he added, "We beat them on Dec. 8 (20-7) and we're hoping to do it again." They'll meet in Detroit.

The 49ers built up a 27-7 lead against the Lions with 2 minutes and 22 seconds gone in the third quarter only to falter and fail.

San Francisco quarterback Y.A. Tittle pitched touchdown passes of 34 yards to R. C. Owens, 47 to Hugh McElhenny and 12 to Billy Wilson. Gordy Soltau added three conversions and two field goals, of 25 and 10 yards.

Then the Lions roared back. Tittle fumbled and Bob Long recovered at the San Francisco 27. With fourth down at the 20, Rote passed complete to Hopalong Cassady at the 6. Two plays later Tom Tracy boomed over from the 1.

Less than two minutes later, Tracy, a 210-pound reserve fullback playing for the injured John Henry Johnson, raced 59 yards to score. Jim Martin's conversion made it 27-21.

On the last play of the third period, Rote hit end Steve Junker for a 37-yard gain to the 15. Tracy crashed for 10, Rote for 3 and Gene Gedman scored, Martin converted and Detroit led for the first time 28-27.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There were six games last weekend with a total of 1,430 points being scored over-all. Tops on the list was the St. Louis Hawks' record-breaking 146-136 victory over Syracuse Saturday night. This broke the Boston Celts record of 142 points in one game.

Sunday, the Hawks grabbed a 123-115 win over Minneapolis. Other games found the New York Knicks beating the Philly Warriors, 126-100, the Boston Celtics winning over the Cincinnati Royals 115-98 and the Syracuse Nats whipping Detroit 119-93.

U. S. Net Hopes Hinge on Seixas

MELBOURNE (AP)—It's Vic Seixas against Australia in the Davis Cup challenge round starting Thursday in the opinion of Harry Hopman, non-playing captain of the Aussies.

"You have to say Vic is the key to the United States' chances," the veteran Australian leader said as he conceded the American ace has a 50-50 chance of winning his two singles tests.

"He is experienced in Davis Cup play," Hopman added. "And he's a tenacious fighter who apparently is in good shape. I figure he is the only man who can win points for America."

Bob Zuppke, Great Football Coach at Illinois, Is Dead

Affectionately known as "Little Dutchman," Zuppke died Sunday at the age of 78 in Cole Memorial Hospital. Cause of death was prostatic cancer, complicated by high blood pressure and a long-standing heart ailment. He suffered a serious stroke in 1955.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday.

Zuppke, who retired in 1941 after 29 years as Illinois' football coach, was given little hope during the past week when his health began failing rapidly.

Zuppke was known as the master of the upset. He produced seven Big Ten titles for Illinois and his teams won 131 games, lost 80 and tied 12.

One of his first big upsets was a 14-9 triumph over a great Minnesota team in 1916. In 1924, he surprised Michigan 39-14. Red Grange, Zuppke's most famous pupil, scored five touchdowns, four in the first quarter, in that game. Probably the last to be remembered was the 13-9 victory over Michigan in 1939 when the Wolverines were riding high with Tom Harmon and Forest Evashevski.

Fritz Crisler, Michigan's athletic director who coached the 1939 Wolverines, said Zuppke was "the coach I most dreaded to meet on the playing field. He was inventive and resourceful and you never knew what he was going to do."

Other coaches throughout the country joined in calling him one of the great college coaches of all time.

After his retirement, Zuppke turned to farming and his hobby of painting. For a while he served as an advisory coach to the Chicago Bears but had to give it up because of ill health. His time in the final years was spent between his apartment in Champaign and his summer home in Muskegon, Mich., where his coaching career began on the high school level in 1905.

He went to the University of Wisconsin where he won a freshman numeral in football but he never did succeed in winning a varsity letter.

Thirty-two years after his graduation he returned to Wisconsin and was awarded his "W" at a banquet observing his 25 years as coach at Illinois.

Sharp-tongued and quick of wit, his sayings through the years became known as Zuppkeisms. Some of his observations included:

"Good losers. I don't like 'em. Show me a team of singers about a defeat and I'll show you a team of punks. I want bad losers.

"If you are too old to play, you try to coach.

"Often an All-American is made by a long run, a weak defense and a poet in the press box.

Zuppke in 1956 married Leona P. Ray, who had been his housekeeper for 23 years. His first wife, Fanny Tillotson Erwin, died in 1936 at the age of 63. They were married in 1908 in Muskegon, and had no children.

Burdette Voted Top Athlete in Wisconsin

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lew Burdette, pitching star of the Milwaukee Braves World Series conquest, has been hailed as Wisconsin's outstanding athlete of 1957.

At his home in Sarasota, Fla., the lanky righthander Sunday said he was overwhelmed, and surprised that folks were still thrusting honors on him.

The latest tribute to his mound fete came when he was named in a Wisconsin Associated Press poll.

Johnson, Sharrer Get Top Tourney Honors

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Minnesota's Ron Johnson and Lloyd Sharrer of West Virginia received an equal number of votes for most valuable player in last weekend's Kentucky invitational tourney.

The other was Jerry West of champion West Virginia. Sharrer was also named, along with Pete Brennan of North Carolina and Vernon Hatton of Kentucky.

Waverly Tournament Next for Lion Cagers

The Lion cagers won't take to the hardwood for a game until Friday, when they go to Waverly for the holiday tournament, but that doesn't mean they won't see plenty of basketball between now and then. After being jolted with a 56-54 upset at Hillsboro, the Lions will be putting in a lot of time practicing for the tournament.

At Waverly, they will meet the boys from New Boston in their first game and will face mostly opponents they would not meet otherwise in succeeding games—if they survive the first one.

Two other Southcentral Ohio League teams will be playing Friday night, too. Greenfield's Tigers will be at Ironton and the Indians will entertain the cagers from Bournville.

Circleville's Tigers will go into action again Saturday night at Franklin Heights and on Jan. 3, Wilmington's Hurricane will play at Waverly.

As the SCO teams go into the brief holiday, three of them are deadlocked for the lead with two wins and one loss— Washington C. H., Hillsboro and Wilmington. Circleville, which has played only two league games, is fourth with one and one and Greenfield's Tigers are trailing with three defeats in a row.

North, South Drill For All-Star Game

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The North squad, rounding into shape for the Christmas night North - South Shrine All-Star college football game in the Orange Bowl, worked on kickoff and punt returns today while the South squad drilled on timing and passing.

Two Michigan State players were elected captains of the North team. Jim Ninowski, quarterback, will direct the offensive unit and Dan Currie, All-America center, will captain the team on defense.

Ohio College Cagers Await Holiday Tests

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The leaders in the Ohio and Mid-American basketball conferences go on out-of-state holiday trips this week while five of the state's cage teams will be in tournament play.

Two other teams will be on tour while Akron entertains Colby College of Maine Saturday for the only in-state non-tourney game of the week.

The Terre Haute and Youngstown tourneys will be played Thursday through Saturday, while Dayton is scheduled to play Thursday, Saturday and next Monday in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference (ECAC) Holiday Festival. Dayton will have the best record among eight teams when it opens against Manhattan.

Winless Ohio State (0-4) is heading west to seek success. The Buckeyes play Oklahoma tonight, Southern California Friday and UCLA Saturday.

Cincinnati (6-0), which won two Missouri Valley games over the weekend, will meet Drake in another conference battle in Des Moines, Iowa, Saturday.

In other games, Wittenberg, the Ohio Conference leader, goes to New Rochelle, N. Y., Saturday to play Iona, and Miami, Mid-American Conference pace-setter, takes on Illinois the same day.

Ohio State Working Out Like Underdog Contestant

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Ohio State's Big Ten champions; 19-points favorites to defeat Oregon in the Rose Bowl game New Years Day, are working as if they were 19-point underdogs.

A pair of two-hour practice sessions were on tap today for coach Woody Hayes' stalwarts and the same menu for Tuesday. The 44-man squad thought Sunday was to be a day of fun and frolic but the players were sent through an hour's drill after a trip to Disneyland and Marineland.

Hayes threw away the usual script upon arrival here Saturday. He had the squad on the practice field as soon as it could be whisked from the Burbank airport to East Los Angeles Junior College, with no hotel stop in between.

Both teams were dinner guests of a Los Angeles night club Moulin Rouge, owned by Frank Sennes, formerly of Warren, Ohio) Saturday night. Both will visit movie studios later in the week.

The rest of the time will be spent polishing plays and defenses. The Webfoots had a picture taking session for news photographers Sunday and Casanova held the squad for an hour's workout after that.

Hayes, who ran into some caustic treatment at the hands of the West Coast press four years ago because of his outspoken tendencies, was friendliness personified in his first meetings with the writers. In fact, one coast columnist said a perfect Christmas gift for the Ohio mentor would be a record of Elvis Presley singing "Stay as Sweet as You Are."

Along with his intense practices, Hayes was taking no chances on running afoul of West Coast officiating. He hired two California whistle tooters, Jay Settle and Jim Tunney Jr., to keep an eagle eye on everyone in the workouts to detect anything which might be okay in the Big Ten but an infraction out here.

Hayes has set a 10 p. m. curfew for his players and said he would decide today whether future practices would be closed to the public and press. Casanova said all Webfoot workouts would be wide open.

Although Ohio has eight of its allotted 16 practice days left and Oregon nine, the rival coaches said they would not use them all since they plan no workouts Christmas day or next Sunday when the wives of the players arrive.

Of the two 44-man squads 15 on each are married. The Webfoot husbands have 10 children with co-captain and guard Harry Mondale being the father of three and tackles Darrel Aschbacher and Tom Keele two each. The Buckeye husbands have a total of five children.

Reds End Special Tax Against Bachelors

What Does Christmas Mean To Kiddies Who Can't See?

By JAMES FACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ever wonder what Christmas means to children who can't see the tree—or even the toys they receive?

Esther Williams took me along the other day to the annual Christmas party for the nursery school for visually handicapped children. She has been going each time for 12 years.

There was a tree all decorated like any other Christmas tree, except that it gave off music from tinkling crystal and bells. Esther was the Santa Claus who distributed the gifts to the children.

And no children could have been happier. One little boy, Doug, sat for an hour with a ball that made music. He shook it and held it to his ear. Then laughed and laughed.

Another boy, born without eyeballs, did the same thing with a toy car that made a noise when he ran the wheels on the carpet. And there was the inevitable boy with a drum.

The little girls got dolls that cried "mama." And telephones that ring.

It was a typical Christmas party except for one thing — the children sat on the floor in one spot for hours at a time. There was no running around or climbing on parents' laps.

This was what Esther first noticed when a studio once sent her to the school for a benefit performance.

"I wondered how these children ever exercised," she said, and suggested that swimming might be the perfect answer. Officials at the school didn't think so, fearing that the children, not knowing what water is, might fear it.

Esther piled some of the kids on her station wagon, took them to a pool and started teaching them to swim.

"I taught them like normal children," she said. The results are best summed up by the record of one 12-year-old girl, first taught by Esther. The child, though blind, has won several junior championships in aquatic meets.

Dr. Lillian Ray Titcomb says the whole program of the school is to treat the children, as far as possible, as normal children.

Californian Now Wishing He Were Really Santa Claus

Mon AD, No. 11: Californian

CHICO, Calif. (AP) — Seventy-one-year-old William A. Gardenhire told a lot of children the other evening that he wasn't Santa Claus. Now he's sorry he did.

He had just sat down to watch a boxing match on television when his phone rang. A child's voice said:

"Hello, Santa Claus?"

Gardenhire said no, he wasn't Santa Claus and the child obviously was disappointed.

"Hello, Santa Claus?"

A check revealed Gardenhire's line had become crossed with one the Chico Junior Chamber of Commerce was using for its annual project of taking calls from tots who wanted to talk with Santa Claus.

A company official appologized. Gardenhire reflected, then wrote to the editor of the Chico Enterprise Record:

"It has been many years since two little arms were around my neck and a trusting voice confided to me all the things he wanted me to get him for Christmas and this experience brought it all vividely to mind.

"If we, as adults, had even a fraction of the faith and trust in God that these innocent children have in Santa Claus, there would never be any need for armies or navies and we would need never fear atom bombs, H-bombs or Sputniks.

"The greatest man who ever set foot on this earth said, 'Who shall offend one of these little ones who believe in me, it were better for him that a mill stone were hanged about his neck and that he would drown in the depths of the sea.'

"I want to apologize to the children for not being Santa Claus but most of all I want to thank them for renewing my faith in God.

"Thank you and a Merry Christmas to you all."

Cliff Clevenger, 72, Decides To Retire as Congressman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Cliff Clevenger, 72-year-old Ohio Republican with nearly 20 years of service in the House, announced today he won't seek re-election next year.

The white haired Clevenger, a conservative who often saw traces of the New Deal in the Eisenhower Administration, thus becomes the second Ohio incumbent to withdraw in recent weeks.

About a week ago, Rep. John M. Vorys (R-Ohio), who came to Congress the same year, 1939, as er assumed office, Clevenger objected to a number of things the GOP administration did, too.

One of these policies was spending.

STOLE THE SHOW—Jaci Johnson wears that sable stole in Las Vegas as a hint of what she'd like from someone on Dec. 25, she claims. (International)

Clevenger, said he intends to return to law practice and teaching at the close of the next session.

Clevenger's announcement that he will retire, issued through his office, offered no explanation for his decision.

However, it is known that one factor is his health. He has high blood pressure.

During his early years in the House, the Bryan, Ohio, Republican fought long and hard against just about every aspect of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal.

As an aide to Clevenger put it: "He never voted for a penny for foreign aid in his life."

Clevenger also had considerable say-so about spending money immediately after Eisenhower was first elected, since he was chairman of an appropriations subcommittee.

Among other things, this subcommittee provided money for the State Department. One of Clevenger's complaints was the Voice of America. He considered it a waste of taxpayers' money.

More recently, Clevenger was the only Ohio Republican in the House to vote against the administration's civil rights bill.

What Does Christmas Mean To Kiddies Who Can't See?

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Ever wonder what Christmas means to children who can't see the tree—or even the toys they receive?

Esther Williams took me along the other day to the annual Christmas party for the nursery school for visually handicapped children. She has been going each time for 12 years.

There was a tree all decorated like any other Christmas tree, except that it gave off music from tinkling crystal and bells. Esther was the Santa Claus who distributed the gifts to the children.

And no children could have been happier. One little boy, Doug, sat for an hour with a ball that made music. He shook it and held it to his ear. Then laughed and laughed.

Another boy, born without eyeballs, did the same thing with a toy car that made a noise when he ran the wheels on the carpet. And there was the inevitable boy with a drum.

The little girls got dolls that cried "mama." And telephones that ring.

It was a typical Christmas party except for one thing — the children sat on the floor in one spot for hours at a time. There was no running around or climbing on parents' laps.

This was what Esther first noticed when a studio once sent her to the school for a benefit performance.

"I wondered how these children ever exercised," she said, and suggested that swimming might be the perfect answer. Officials at the school didn't think so, fearing that the children, not knowing what water is, might fear it.

Esther piled some of the kids on her station wagon, took them to a pool and started teaching them to swim.

"I taught them like normal children," she said. The results are best summed up by the record of one 12-year-old girl, first taught by Esther. The child, though blind, has won several junior championships in aquatic meets.

Dr. Lillian Ray Titcomb says the whole program of the school is to treat the children, as far as possible, as normal children.

Mon AD, No. 11: Californian

CHICO, Calif. (AP) — Seventy-one-year-old William A. Gardenhire told a lot of children the other evening that he wasn't Santa Claus. Now he's sorry he did.

He had just sat down to watch a boxing match on television when his phone rang. A child's voice said:

"Hello, Santa Claus?"

Gardenhire said no, he wasn't Santa Claus and the child obviously was disappointed.

"Hello, Santa Claus?"

A check revealed Gardenhire's line had become crossed with one the Chico Junior Chamber of Commerce was using for its annual project of taking calls from tots who wanted to talk with Santa Claus.

Gardenhire reflected, then wrote to the editor of the Chico Enterprise Record:

"It has been many years since two little arms were around my neck and a trusting voice confided to me all the things he wanted me to get him for Christmas and this experience brought it all vividly to mind.

"If we, as adults, had even a fraction of the faith and trust in God that these innocent children have in Santa Claus, there would never be any need for armies or navies and we would need never fear atom bombs, H-bombs or Sputniks.

"The greatest man who ever set foot on this earth said, 'Who shall offend one of these little ones who believe in me, it were better for him that a mill stone were hanged about his neck and that he would drown in the depths of the sea.'

"I want to apologize to the children for not being Santa Claus but most of all I want to thank them for renewing my faith in God.

"Thank you and a Merry Christmas to you all."

Cliff Clevenger, 72, Decides To Retire as Congressman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Cliff Clevenger, 72-year-old Ohio Republican with nearly 20 years of service in the House, announced today he won't seek re-election next year.

The white haired Clevenger, a conservative who often saw traces of the New Deal in the Eisenhower Administration, thus becomes the second Ohio incumbent to withdraw in recent weeks.

About a week ago, Rep. John M. Vorys (R-Ohio), who came to Congress the same year, 1939, as er assumed office, Clevenger objected to a number of things the GOP administration did, too.

One of these policies was spend-

STOLE THE SHOW—Jaci Johnson wears that sable stole in Las Vegas as a hint of what she'd like from someone on Dec. 25, she claims. (International)

Clevenger, said he intends to return to law practice and teaching at the close of the next session.

Clevenger's announcement that he will retire, issued through his office, offered no explanation for his decision.

However, it is known that one factor is his health. He has high blood pressure.

During his early years in the House, the Bryan, Ohio, Republican fought long and hard against just about every aspect of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal.

As an aide to Clevenger put it: "He never voted for a penny for foreign aid in his life."

Clevenger also had considerable say-so about spending money immediately after Eisenhower was first elected, since he was chairman of an appropriations subcommittee.

Among other things, this subcommittee provided money for the State Department. One of Clevenger's complaints was the Voice of America. He considered it a waste of taxpayers' money.

More recently, Clevenger was the only Ohio Republican in the House to vote against the administration's civil rights bill.

Been taking a refresher course in cooking while Elma is in the hospital. I find I can make very good instant coffee and one one or two occasions I fried bacon and eggs. Except for pieces of eggshell the egg was O. K. Oh! I did splash grease all over me when I turned it over.

The many calls and inquiries, the flowers, fruit, etc. sent to her really warms her heart and mine. The very fact that folks are genuinely interested in your welfare is very pleasing. So folks we want you to know although words cannot express our feelings, we sincerely appreciate everything. She is doing fine as of this writing and it looks like she will get home in time for Christmas for which we are thankful. Makes me realize once again that there is a good Lord watching over us.

Christmas shopping has been in full swing. Santa had a big time last week. About twenty youngsters were made happy last Thursday by a group of ladies at the Dayton Power & Light Building. The American Legion party was bigger than ever. Headed by Dr. Pfersick, that group deserves a lot of credit. No one realizes the tremendous amount of hard work they do to make this party a success. Isn't it wonderful that we have so many fine things for which we can be thankful.

Our wish at Brandenburg's, from all of us to all of you, a very pleasant Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Been taking a refresher course in cooking while Elma is in the hospital. I find I can make very good instant coffee and one one or two occasions I fried bacon and eggs. Except for pieces of eggshell the egg was O. K. Oh! I did splash grease all over me when I turned it over.

The many calls and inquiries, the flowers, fruit, etc. sent to her really warms her heart and mine. The very fact that folks are genuinely interested in your welfare is very pleasing. So folks we want you to know although words cannot express our feelings, we sincerely appreciate everything. She is doing fine as of this writing and it looks like she will get home in time for Christmas for which we are thankful. Makes me realize once again that there is a good Lord watching over us.

Christmas shopping has been in full swing. Santa had a big time last week. About twenty youngsters were made happy last Thursday by a group of ladies at the Dayton Power & Light Building. The American Legion party was bigger than ever. Headed by Dr. Pfersick, that group deserves a lot of credit. No one realizes the tremendous amount of hard work they do to make this party a success. Isn't it wonderful that we have so many fine things for which we can be thankful.

Our wish at Brandenburg's, from all of us to all of you, a very pleasant Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Saturday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

A Cryptogram Quotation

Saturday's Cryptoquote: ALL THE RIVERS RUN INTO THE SEA; YET THE SEA IS NOT FULL—ECCLESIASTES.

Car Crushed In Three-Car Collision Here

An Elm St. man's auto was wrecked about 9:50 p. m. Sunday in a three-car pileup on E. Court St. near Columbus Ave. This was one of two auto accidents reported to city police over the weekend.

Driver of the car, Stanley Boisel, 25, of 717 S. Elm St., escaped uninjured. But the front and rear ends of his car were smashed when they got caught in the middle of the triple end-to-end collision.

Boisel told police he had just passed a car driven by James Carr, 42, of 121 McKinley St., and had pulled back into line when a car in front of him, driven by Robert B. Williams, 30, of Point Pleasant, W. Va., stopped in the street, in preparation to making a turn.

Carr hit the back of Boisel's car and pushed it forward into Williams'. Damage to Carr's and Williams' autos was light.

A door panel was the only casualty in a mishap about 5:45 p. m. Saturday on the lot at Frisch's Big Boy Drive-In, between Clinton and Highland Aves.

Clyde R. Smith, 70, of 904 Leesburg, told police he backed out of a diagonal parking slot at the restaurant and hit the door of a car driven by Larry D. Milstead, 17, of 1012 Yeoman St., passing behind him.

Drivers of none of the auto involved was cited by police.

City Council

men who will be seated Jan. 1 should be given a chance to study such an important move. He was told that the two new councilmen, were aware that the proposal as presented was being considered in quiet informal meetings.

Both Parkinson and Sanderson said they saw no urgency for annexation legislation, but it was pointed out that some action must be taken by Feb. 6 if a proposal is to be submitted to voters in May.

PARKINSON called attention to the potentially large outlays for additional police protection and maintenance of roads and highways if the annexation plan is approved.

While annexation has never been on the table at a formal Council session, previous discussions have centered around a ring of territory which the Fayette County Board of Education had agreed to transfer to the city in 1956. This was never carried out because of remonstrances filed by property owners in the area involved.

IN OTHER major action Monday, Council:

Renewed fire contracts with Union Township (at $250 per month) and with a group of Union Township property owners whose land extends into other townships;

Raised the salaries of substitute Firemen Kenneth Craig and Harold Sprague from $252 to $300 per month;

Appointed Harold Moats to a full term on the Union Cemetery Board of Trustees and Stanley Paxton, Ed Fite and Mrs. Judith Ann Cornwell to new terms on the Carnegie Library Board of Trustees;

Made it unlawful to park automobiles on the north side of Rawlings St. between North and Pearl Sts.;

Commended retiring Councilmen Ronald Cornwell and Floyd Tracy for their services and devotion to duty, and gave special recognition and a gift to City Auditor Marie Melvin who will retire Dec. 31;

Commie Delegates Cheered in Cairo

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Five thousand students and workers turned out Sunday to cheer 70 delegates and secretaries arriving from Communist countries for the Asian-African Congress. The arrivals were pelted with flowers.

A Soviet TU104 jet airliner brought the visitors from the Soviet Union, Outer Mongolia, North Viet Nam and Red China.

The Communist delegates were the first large group to arrive for the weeklong conference of "non-government" groups from 44 countries, which opens Thursday.

Nationalists Tell Of Gunboat Duel

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—The Nationalist Defense Ministry reported today that its warships clashed for 62 minutes early today with two Chinese Communist gunboats just off the mainland.

The Nationalists said they suffered no casualties or damage and made no claims of hits on the Red gunboats. The number and type of Nationalist ships involved were not disclosed. It was the first such report since Nov. 5, when the Nationalists claimed to have sunk six ships.

truck hit, the prosecutor and the sheriff were told.

The road is straight and level for several hundred yards on each side of the fatal spot, but there is not room on the sides for a truck to pull off without going into a ditch.

It was on Oct. 23 of this year that Charlotte Kay Giffin, 12-week-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Giffin of Greenfield, was killed when her father's car was involved in a rear-end collision a mile south of the location of Monday's accident.

Timothy Hundley, 18-year-old construction flagman from Lebanon, died Aug. 20 of injuries sustained the day before when he was hit by a car 100 yards south of where the Giffin baby died. Driver of the car, Albert Williamson, 67, of Hillsboro, pleaded guilty to second-degree manslaughter in that accident.

Other fatal accident victims this year were Dwight H. Dunkle of Good Hope, who died Aug. 19 and Clifford Ryan of Leesburg, who died Jan. 15.

Efforts still being made to contact Bagdonas' relatives or friends in Pennsylvania. Neither the sheriff nor the Kirkpatrick Funeral Home, where the body was taken, had located any of them by noon Monday.

Chennault Revealed As Cancer Victim

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Retired Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, leader of the World War II Flying Tigers, disclosed today that he is suffering from cancer of the lung.

The 67-year-old U. S. military aviation pioneer said a tumor was removed from his left lung in August 1956. But he said the malignancy returned and no further operation was possible.

Chennault organized the Flying Tigers, an outfit of American fliers, to fight with Chiang Kai-shek's forces before the Japanese attackeddPearl Harbor.

He now is chairman of the Board of Directors of Civil Air Transport, the Far Eastern airline he founded 11 years ago.

After pulling the loaded truck away from the cab, two wreckers, one pulling in each direction, pulled the wreck apart enough to allow Bagdon's body to be removed from the crushed cab. Six Dogs Left In Pound Here Await Home

"Say, if you know of any little boy or girl that would like one of those dogs out at the county pound, but doesn't have the $4—let me know."

That was the conversation when a Record-Herald reporter drove into a service station over the weekend.

And last Thursday night the editor received a telephone call at his home which went something like this: 'There are so many youngsters that would like to have one of those lovely dogs for Christmas—if any of them don't have the $4 needed to get the dog, you call me. I'll be happy to see that the child gets the money for the dog's keep and license.'

There is something about the Christmas spirit that opens the hearts, and the purses, of Fayette Countians.

Reginald (Chink) Davis, county dog warden, said Monday that only six of the 10 dogs reported Thursday are still at the pound. "I've had lots more calls, but many of the callers wanted only registered animals," Davis said.

Anyone wanting one of the dogs should call Davis at 3-6641. The total charge for any animal at the pound is $3—$2 its keep and $2 for a 1958 dog license.

Both the Zeta Upsilon and Xi Beta Phi chapters of the sorority participated in the affairs.

Car Crushed In Three-Car Collision Here

An Elm St. man's auto was wrecked about 9:50 p. m. Sunday in a three-car pileup on E. Court St. near Columbus Ave. This was one of two auto accidents reported to city police over the weekend.

Driver of the car, Stanley Boisel, 25, of 717 S. Elm St., escaped uninjured. But the front and rear ends of his car were smashed when they got caught in the middle of the triple end-to-end collision.

Boisel told police he had just passed a car driven by James Carr, 42, of 121 McKinley St., and had pulled back into line when a car in front of him, driven by Robert B. Williams, 30, of Point Pleasant, W. Va., stopped in the street, in preparation to making a turn.

Carr hit the back of Boisel's car and pushed it forward into Williams'. Damage to Carr's and Williams' autos was light.

A door panel was the only casualty in a mishap about 5:45 p. m. Saturday on the lot at Frisch's Big Boy Drive-In, between Clinton and Highland Aves.

Clyde R. Smith, 70, of 904 Leesburg, told police he backed out of a diagonal parking slot at the restaurant and hit the door of a car driven by Larry D. Milstead, 17, of 1012 Yeoman St., passing behind him.

Drivers of none of the auto involved was cited by police.

men who will be seated Jan. 1 should be given a chance to study such an important move. He was told that the two new councilmen, were aware that the proposal as presented was being considered in quiet informal meetings.

Both Parkinson and Sanderson said they saw no urgency for annexation legislation, but it was pointed out that some action must be taken by Feb. 6 if a proposal is to be submitted to voters in May.

PARKINSON called attention to the potentially large outlays for additional police protection and maintenance of roads and highways if the annexation plan is approved.

While annexation has never been on the table at a formal Council session, previous discussions have centered around a ring of territory which the Fayette County Board of Education had agreed to transfer to the city in 1956. This was never carried out because of remonstrances filed by property owners in the area involved.

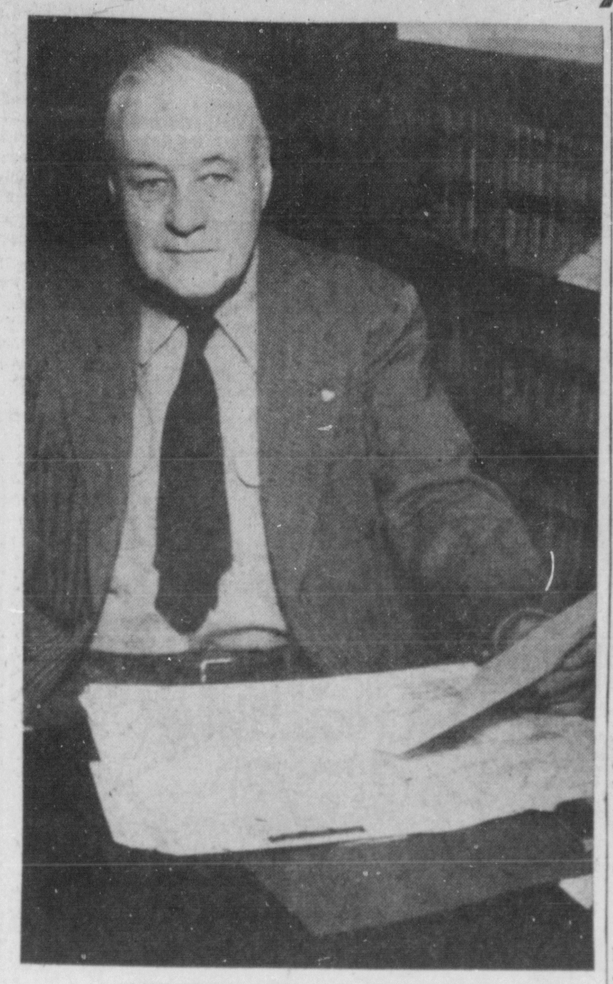
It's Been a Lot of Fun For Jeffersonville's 'Squire'

Fayette County 'JP Era' Nears End



MUNICIPAL JUDGE MAX G. DICE
His Jurisdiction Becomes Countrywide

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE CLARENCE ROBINSON
There's an Emptiness--a Nostalgia

By JACK AYER

For a handful of men in Ohio's small towns and villages—including one in Fayette County—Wednesday, Jan. 1, 1958, will be more than just the beginning of a new year.

It will mean the end—the end of long and arduous service for these men, and the end of an era in Ohio history.

That's the date set by the Legislature last June for the abolition of justice of the peace courts. There after "The Jay Pee Courts," as they are usually called, will function no more.

CLARENCE ROBINSON of Jeffersonville, a 73-year-old stationary fireman who is witty but firm, is one of those J P's, and he's probably somewhat typical of the lot.

For him, justice of the peace work i Jefferson Township has been a noble and responsible part-time occupation during 18 long and busy years. For him, though he sees some logic in the all-county court system, the elimination of his job leaves little but emptiness and nostalgia.

He isn't sentimental about it—he knows it meant "a lot of headaches." But he's quick to add that it's been "a lot of fun."

JUDGE MAX G. DICE, presently on the Municipal Court bench in Washington C. H., will assume most of Robinson's duties in his new capacity as head of an all-county Municipal Court. A few cases may also be handled by the Jeffersonville mayor, who has some court powers.

In fact, Judge Dice has been handling some of Squire Robinson's work ever since early July, when Ohio's new "County Court" law went into effect as an emergency measure. County Prosecutor Rollo Marchant said he has filed several cases in Municipal Court which would have gone otherwise to the learned squire.

But only with the passing of the year will Robinson's authority be stripped from him.

A native of this area, Robinson was appointed a justice of the peace or township magistrate by the then-governor, John W. Bricker. He's run for reelection every time, but he's had no opposition.

MOST of his cases are assault and battery matters, he observes, although he says he also gets highway patrol cases, sheriff's cases and an occasional fish and game case.

His biggest fines usually run no more than $200—usually in conservation cases. However, as mayor of Jeffersonville (a post he held from 1949 until 1953) he once fined three Cincinnati hunters $300 each for hunting on Sunday.

He recollects there were "indications" the men had been up to a little poaching on the side, although that wasn't written into the charge.

Fines are meted out to the guilty in relation to the "nature of the offense" and the "attitude they take," Robinson observes. Such firm behavior, naturally, has netted Robinson "a lot of enemies" as well as a lot of friends, but he says "the big proportion of folks are my friends now."

SQUIRE ROBINSON'S assiduity about his job showed up in June 1957, when the state auditor looked over his books and found his books were "off" only $1.25 in 3½ years.

At 73, Robinson still goes daily to his job as a stationary fireman at the Fred W. Mears Co., South Charleston. He tried to retire several years ago, but they wouldn't let him.

Judge Dice said he doesn't beleive the additional case load from Jefferson Township will make much difference in his overall operation here. His general duties will remain the same.

WHEN THE COUNTY COURT law was passed last summer, there was speculation that the Municipal Court here might become one of the new County Courts. That would have meant at least $6,000 a year for the judge who would have had a full - time job.

But amendment of the old Municipal Court law allowed the Washington C. H. court to take jurisdiction in Jefferson Township and Jeffersonville without altering its present form.

The amendments also increased the minimum population which could be served by a part-time judge from 20,000 to 50,000. Thus Judge Dice remains a part-time judge at the old salary of $3,600 per year.

The Municipal Court was organized in 1951 with all-county jurisdiction except for Jeffersonville and Jefferson Township and with present Probate Judge Robert L. Brubaker as its first magistrate. When he resigned to take his present position three years ago, Judge Dice was appointed by Gov. Frank J. Lausche to fill the vancy.

Judge Dice later was elected to fill the unexpired term and last Nov. 5 was returned to office without opposition for the full six-year term.

THE MUNICIPAL COURT here is differentiated from the Common Pleas Court and other higher courts in that it has final jurisdiction only over misdemeanors and civil actions involving less than $3,000.

A Municipal Court judge may dismiss a felony charge, but if he decides there is cause for further hearing, he must deliver the case to the grand jury. The grand jury may also dismiss, but if it decides a case deserves still further hearing, the Common Pleas Court must hold a trial.

Civil actions involving more than $100 may be brought in the Common Pleas Court, but if they involve less than $3,000 they may also be brought in the Municipal Court.

The new "county courts" have jurisdiction like that of the Municipal Courts.

St. Francis Made Contributions to Christmas Custom

Some 400 years before St. Nicholas, Bishop of Myra, performed the many acts of generosity and kindness which made his life a great legend and gave him the "Santa Claus" character we know today, another saint — St. Francis of Assisi made other contributions to our celebration of Christmas.

St. Francis lived in the small Italian village of Garcia. In the year 1200 A. D., St. Francis arranged the first manager scene in a cave near the monastery where he lived. The scene was typical of that at Bethlehem. There was a manger filled with hay, an ox and an ass. St. Francis and his followers celebrated mass at the cave and sang hymns in honor of the Christ Child.

Himself a lover of music, St. Francis believed that the early chants (written in Latin) were too theological to be popular. He felt that Christmas music should be religious, yet should be more in keeping with the festivity spirit. He is generally credited with being the influence behind the more modern Christmas carols, which spread from Italy to France, from there to Germany; then to England and elsewhere.

Future Heroes Must Be on Foot

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—This city, which has many equestrian statues, says statues of future heroes must be on foot-or replaced by something like a memorial carillon.

Planning officials say the age of equestrian statues ended when tanks, planes and other mechanical devices replaced the horse. And they don't think a Patton on a tank, a Doolittle in a plane or a MacArthur in a PT boat would be appropriate on a memorial boulevard.

Traffic officials are expected to be happy about this.

40-Year Record Is Still Clean

COLUMBIA, S. C. (AP) — After driving 3¼ million miles in over 40 years, Lewis E. Wright Jr. of Columbia got his first ticket—a summons for a parking meter violation.

Mildy ruffled, Wright went to the police station and protested. The name and address were his all right, Wright said, but the license number of the overparked car certainly wasn't.

Police quickly admitted a mistake had been made. The summons was cancelled, leaving Wright's traffic record unmarred.

Steam Engines Wheeze On New Record Album

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Mark Twain once described the mournful bellow of a steamboat whistle as the most hauntingly beautiful sound this side of the bird kingdom.

The mighty magic of their blasts brought dreams of far away places and seemed to sing of something primitive and something very modern at same time.

The sound of the steamboat is heard no more in the land, but to millions of Americans born and brought up on both sides of the tracks the mournful, masculine sign of the locomotive steam engine brings the same memories of romance and adventure and far away places.

THEY, TOO, are gradually passing from the land with the advent of the raucous Diesel horn, but their magical spell has been preserved on records in "Railroad Sounds, Sounds of a Vanishing Era," an unusual album put out by Audiofidelity Records, a company specializing in hi fi sounds in the higher hearing cycles.

One side of the record— and by far the best side— is entirely devoted to capturing the grunts and groans and deep - throated whistles of steam engines, starting up, taking off, lumbering up a hill, pounding over a trestle, calling for a grade crossing, fading away in the distance.

As soloists in this wonderfully noisy album, the venerable steam giants of the Illinois Central Railroad turn in a magnificent performance and the road's New Orleans yard makes an excellent concert hall.

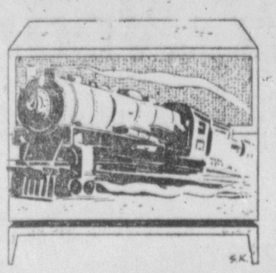
THE OTHER SIDE, aimed at those who can compromise nostalgia with progress, attempts the same thing for Diesel engines and Diesel horns, but the old charm and call to adventure just isn't there.

Diesel horns were invented to get cows off the track, not to inspire dreamers.

In another unusual sound experiment, Audiofidelity offers "The Berkshire Bellringers," an attractively packaged album of Christmas carols played by a group of talented handbell ringers.

For best results, this record should be played at maximum bearable volume, which is probably why the album is suggested for outdoor use through loudspeakers attached to your roof-top during the holiday season. It's guaranteed to turn every house into a cathedral.



provided the neighbors don't rebel and start a holy war.

FOR THOSE who believe Christmas presents are mainly for the children, several record albums are made to order.

In "Tell It Again," an Angel recording, Julie Andrews of "My Fair Lady" fame and Martyn Green of Gilbert & Sullivan fame form a dramatic duet to render a collection of nursery rhymes, lullabies and learning songs.

Similarly, Paul Wing and Ray Middleton, in an RCA Camden album, go through a happy grab bag of "Favorite Stories for Children." And Columbia offers Mickey Rooney's version of "Pinocchio" and an engaging "First Christmas Record for Children," featuring Gene Autry, Rosemary Clooney, Burl Ives and several other stars.

Wants Proper Start

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A couple consulted Charles Karpinski, an attorney, about a divorce. He learned that actually they weren't legally married and told them so. They came back the next day and got advice on how to make the marriage legal.

Early Christmases Strictly Religious

Although records indicate that the Christmas festival was spoken of in the fourth century as a custom of long standing, the exact age of the holiday is not known.

Christmas actually began as a strictly religious observance and was officially recognized in the Fourth Century as Christ's Mass, or the Mass of Christ. And it is quite significant to note that until this time it had been the custom of the church to celebrate the anniversaries of deaths, rather than births, so Christ's birthday was appropriately the first to be made an occasion for feasting.

It was many years after the first observance of Christ's Mass before gift -giving became a part of the festival season. The church finally condoned the practice, in remembrance of the Three Kings who had traveled far to present their gifts to the new born Christ.

IN OTHER centuries, too, the feast of Christmas was to be the subject of controversy. In England, during the Reformation, many believed the undue jollity of Christmas Day to be sacrilegious. The English Parliament, on Dec. 24, 1652, ordered that "no observance shall be held of the five and twentieth day of December, commonly called Christmas Day; nor any colemnity used or exercised in churches upon that day in respect thereof."

Naturally, the edict proved to be very unpopular with the masses of the people, but it had its effect and it was many years before Christmas was once again regarded as a holiday.

Sick-In-Bed Child Needs Play

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.

Such easy orders to give and such difficult ones to carry out!

During a little child's acute illness it's not hard to keep him quiet. It is then he lies still and you wish to Heaven he'd show a little of his usual spark.

Mothers always find somewhere within themselves the reserve stock of energy to cope with the serious phase of illness.

The worry, the sleepless nights, the treatments that a sick child resists, all these things mothers take in their stride.

But when the child is on the mend, feels pretty good, but must stay in bed, then comes the hard pull.

There are a few tricks that help these days pass with a minimum of difficulty.

FIRST, GENTLE but absolutely firm insistence that the child stay in bed is essential. Possibly you may allow periods on the couch in the living room as a variation from his bed; but no running around no matter how much he wheedles. Many a child prefers Mother's bed to his own when he is sick.

Next, routines help. A little child likes to know when things are going to happen. When it is juice time, lunch time, how long must he rest, when is medicine due. If he is old enough, put a clock beside his bed and let him remind you.

A word of warning about medicine. Keep it out of sight and out of climbing reach. Bring it into his room every time he needs a dose. You have praised him so often for being a good boy when he swallowed his medicine that he may decide to be a very good boy while you're out of the room and take the whole bottle!

A CLEAN BRIGHT attractive room will cheer a youngster. Try a different bedspread (not necessarily new) a new pair of pajamas, some bright pictures on the wall (cut out of magazines).

An underwater bouquet in a sunny window adds color and pleasure. Tie together two or three flowers and a bit of greenery and attach a weight. Place in a clear glass jar and fill with cold water, add a teaspoon of salt and seal the jar tight shut. It will last a week or longer.

A bed tray is a great help, both for meals and for play.

STORYBOOK TOYS . . . New three-dimensional polystyrene toys illustrating places and characters from favorite childhood stories provide hours of quiet play for convalescent children. The toys are easily assembled and bring stories to life.

Since you cannot bring up a family of children without occasional days of convalescence, a bed tray is a good family investment.

Incidentally this is a wonderful Christmas present for a grandma or an aunt or uncle to contribute.

If you do not have a bed tray, improvise one. Two straight chairs on either side of the bed will hold a straight board. One straight chair placed upside down on the bed with the back of the chair toward the child, will hold a board in an inclined position for play.

NEXT COME the things to play with. They should be little things, new things, and things to play with, not just look at. Small cars and trucks for running up and down the board, a set of small blocks, about an inch long, small dolls and doll clothes, crayons and coloring books, puzzles.

A sick - abed box comes in handy during these difficult days. Into the box go all sort of discarded articles— jewelry, Christmas cards, worn playing cards, leftover party favors, pieces of cloth or lace or ribbons, artificial flowers, old small wooden boxes, gloves, a worn handbag, empty spools — almost anything.

A sick-abed box has novelty and stimulates the child's imagination and often keeps him happy while you get a little of your absolutely essential housework done. Pin a shoebag to the side of the bed for keeping these articles handy.

A SMALL record player, a radio and the all - important television are a great boon to a harassed mother. Television usually means a bed made up on the living room couch which can be done for a few hours in the afternoon and provides a needed change.

When the most intriguing toys lose their charm, its time for stories read or told, and companionship with mother. With careful planning, however, most sick-abed youngsters will play by themselves some of the time.

Christmas Day Observance Once Forbidden in America

Christmas was first observed in England around A. D. 521, during the reign of King Arthur. Observance of the holiday (as well as that of Easter) was forbidden when the Puritans conquered in 1642.

They passed an act in Parliament forbidding the celebration of both holidays and it was not until the Restoration of Charles II that these Christian practices again became prevalent in England.

Most historians credit Charles Dickens' immortal "Christmas Carol" as being perhaps the most effective force behind England's return to the observance of Christmas.

CELEBRATING Christmas was at one time forbidden on American shores. In 1659, the general court of Massachusetts Bay Colony passed a law stipulating a fine of five shillings for anyone "found observing any such day as Christmas, or the like, either by forebearing labor, feasting or any other way, as a festival. . ."

Almost 30 years later, the first "legal" Christmas was observed in America when Gov. Andros conducted services in the town hall of Boston.

Many of our modern Christmas customs resulted from early efforts to transform major pagan customs under Christian influence.

In the Eighth Century, St. Boniface, an English missionary to Germany, persuaded his converts to substitute a green fir tree for their sacred oak and to adorn the green tree in a way that would pay tribute to the Christ Child

Bethlehem's Stable Cold, Dark and Bare

Perhaps the most authentic duplication of the first manger scene was that prepared by St. Francis of Assisi in the year 1200.

The Stable of Bethlehem did not in any way resemble the elaborate and decorative scenes which are seen today, with greenery, bright lights, and plaster of Paris animals and adoring shepherds.

There was no room in the inn that night, so Jesus was born in a stable; a crude shelter hewn into a rocky ledge of the Judean countryside. It was cold and dark and damp, and bare of ornaments.

Weary Judean travelers often spent the night in such caves, welcoming rather than disdaining joint tenancy with beasts because the breath of the cattle and the heat of their bodies provided a little warmth.

The cave which believed to have been the birthplace of the Saviour is now a grotto beneath Bethlehem's Church of the Nativity, and though fascinated by the simplicity of the original Nativity scene, Christianity has still embellished it with comfort and ornamentation.

Duck Delays Traffic, Officer Adopts Him

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP)—It was clear and dry, certainly not a good day for ducks. But that's whas was holding up traffic when patrolmen Clarence Bailey and Lloyd Brewer arrived—a duck.

Then the owner, Mrs. Ralph DeJarntete, arrived to say the duck's name was Mort and that she wanted to give Mort away. Patrolman Bailey ended his report: "All parties concerned are happy, even Mort."

Bailey took him home. . .as a pet.

May Christmas come to your house, bringing the light of good cheer and the warmth of good friends and good fellowship. All best wishes to you!

Sick-In-Bed Child Needs Play

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.

During a little child's acute illness it's not hard to keep him quiet. It is then he lies still and you wish to Heaven he'd show a little of his usual spark.

Mothers always find somewhere within themselves the reserve stock of energy to cope with the serious phase of illness.

The worry, the sleepless nights, the treatments that a sick child resists, all these things mothers take in their stride.

But when the child is on the mend, feels pretty good, but must stay in bed, then comes the hard pull.

There are a few tricks that help these days pass with a minimum of difficulty.

FIRST, GENTLE but absolutely firm insistence that the child stay in bed is essential. Possibly you may allow periods on the couch in the living room as a variation from his bed; but no running around no matter how much he wheedles. Many a child prefers Mother's bed to his own when he is sick.

Next, routines help. A little child likes to know when things are going to happen. When it is juice time, lunch time, how ong must he rest, when is medicine due. If he is old enough, put a clock beside his bed and let him remind you.

Santa and the STRONG BOY

by LUCRECE HUDGINS BEALE

SYNOPSIS: Santa gives Richard the golden threat and the black diamond so he will always remember to be a proper prince. He also tells him the soldiers of King Ignatz are at the gates of Mitzenpoo and promises to take him there on his sleigh.

"Merry Christmas!" cried Santa as he sailed away.

CHAPTER 17

A MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL

Santa and Richard sped through the cold silent night. On and on they went above the sleeping world until they came to the Kingdom of Mitzenpoo.

Richard peered over the side of the sleigh. He saw his father's palace with a light shining from every window. In the courtyard the people of Mitzenpoo huddled while a hoard of foreign soldiers battered at the gates.

"I'm coming!" shouted the prince. But no one looked up or seemed to hear.

"We are invisible as long as we are in the sleigh," said Santa. "No one can see or hear us on the sleigh until I crack my whip. Hang on, now, we are going down."

Gently the reindeer brought the sleigh to a halt on the palace roof. Richard leaped out and climbed down the sides of the palace wall to the courtyard below.

"Everything will be all right!" he shouted to the people huddled in the corners. "Don't be afraid!"

The people looked at him in astonishment. "Who is it?" they asked among themselves and Richard heard others answer, "It's the coward prince come back too late. What good is he to Mitzenpoo?"

Richard rushed into the palace. He found his father sitting at his desk surrounded by his guards. The king's face was grey with cares and grief. His hand shook as he signed a paper before him on the desk.

"Father, father! I am here!"

The old king stared at Richard in sorrow. "So you are back," he whispered. "Ah, poor wretch. You cannot help what you are but things would have been different if only you had been a proper prince—wise and brave and strong.

"Now I am dying and there is no one else to lead our soldiers or save our people. I surrender now to Ignatz of Ketchikan who henceforth will rule in Mitzenpoo."

"Never!" cried Richard. He snatched up the paper and tore it into pieces. Then he drew his black diamond dagger and turned towards the guards.

"Follow me!"

The astonished guards followed him as he charged out of the palace and the people, seeing him, took up sticks and rushed along behind the guards.

"Leave our land or surrender!" cried Richard.

Ignatz stared and burst into laughter. "It's the strong boy himself!" he cried. "The halfwit of the circus!"

He rushed forward with his spear but Richard stood his ground and knocked Ignatz to the ground with one swing of his strong arm. The guards and people of Mitzenpoo cheered madly and set upon the soldiers of Ketchikan who fled in dismay when they saw their king on the ground. Ignatz and his men were defeated and never bothered Mitzenpoo or any other kingdom again.

Then the people lifted Richard to their shoulders and carried him in to the king. The old man wept and embraced his son. "Now I can die in peace," he whispered. "For, in you, Mitzenpoo will have a mighty king."

Suddenly there was the crack of a whip and the sound of sleigh bells tinkling. The people rushed to the window.

"It's Santa! Look! Look! It's Santa himself whom we've never seen before!"

Richard climbed on a table and peered over their shoulders.

Sure enough, there was Santa's sleign in the courtyard below and there was Santa himself emptying a giant bag of gifts for the people of Mitzenpoo.

When the sack was empty Santa cracked his whip again and the sleigh rose into the air.

"Merry Christmas!" cried Santa as he sailed away.

Oil Man Urges 'Coffee Stop' As Safety Step

COLUMBUS — "Make a stop for coffee a step toward safety in holiday driving ahead," motorists were advised today by Addison E. Dewey, executive secretary of the Ohio Petroleum Industry Committee.

He suggests that motorists use "coffee breaks" as a means of staying alert behind the wheel, especially in the coming weeks. He pointed out that 58 persons died in traffic accidents on Ohio roads during the Christmas and New Year's holidays last year.

Dewey noted that his organization, composed of oilmen from throughout the state, has again pledged its support in the National Safety Council's campaign to "Back the Attack on Traffic Accidents" during the holiday season and throughout 1958. "We join with safety officials in the belief that traffic fatalities can be greatly reduced if individual motorists and pedestrians will make it their personal responsibility to follow safe practices at all times," he said.

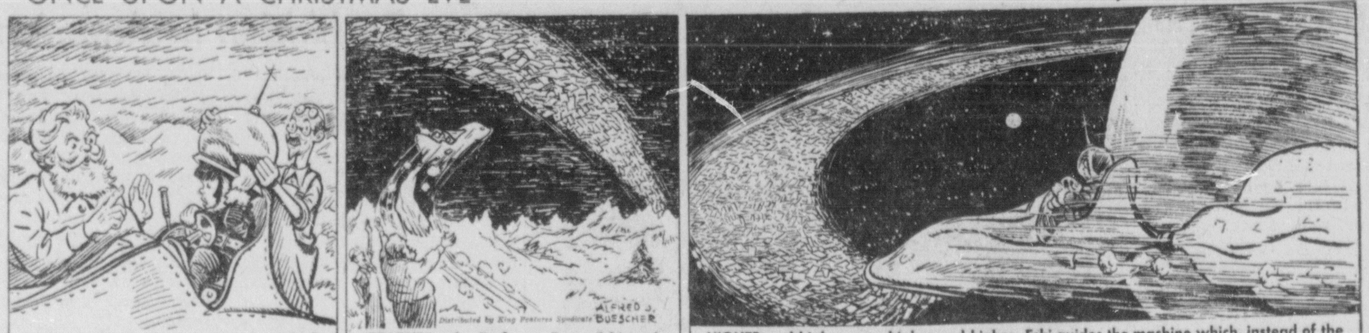
ONCE UPON A CHRISTMAS EVE

By WILLIAM RITT



SANTA CLAUS finally agrees to let Eski fly the atomic vacuum sweeper into the sky in an effort to swoop up and bring back the lost letters. So, Eski dons a space helmet and gets set to go on the dangerous mission.

"READY?" asks Professor Dee. Eski nods. Then--Zoo-o-o-oom!--at lightning speed the machine, which is also a space ship, flashes forward, up and away into the dark North Polar sky, up toward the glittering stars.

HIGHER and higher, ever higher and higher, Eski guides the machine which, instead of the usual vacuum dust receptacle, now trails Santa Claus' magic, expanding gift sack behind it. Brave little Eski!--to risk your life so the world's children won't be unhappy on Christmas Day! Far above the tallest mountains, the sweeper soars, and then--into the white stream of the lost letters! Will Eski succeed?--or will he, too, be lost? (To Be Concluded)

Christmas Tree Uses Are Many After Christmas

There are a number of uses to which the Christmas tree can be put after it has served its purpose in the home.

Longer branches can be planted as windbreaks to protect outdoor plantings such as low growing boxwood, azalea, yew rhododendron and juniper. Little teepees can be built around exposed shrubs and tender plants. This will protect them from biting, drying winds and prevent snow and ice from accumulating and bending the plants out of shape.

Other branches curved end up over flower beds when the ground is exposed will prevent heaving of soils during alternate freezing and thawing. Heaving may force bulbs and roots of perennials from the ground.

The entire tree may be used as a bird feeder in the back yard. It may be either anchored securely or fastened to a fence. Pieces of suet tied to its branches and a container of water nearby will provide a constant supply of food for feathered friends.

It's in the Bag: Oldtime Pudding

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
(By The Associated Press)

Do old-fashioned arts interest you? Then how about boiling your holiday plum puddings in muslin bags the oldtime way? If you want to give some of the puddings away, make them look like icy snowballs by coating them in melted paraffin and then decorate with greens.

BOILED PLUM PUDDING

Ingredients: 1 pound seedless raisins, 1 pound golden raisens, 1 pound currants, ½ pound candied lemon peel, ½ pound candied orange peel, ½ pound citron, ½ pound blanched almonds, 2 cups orange juice, 1 cup flour, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 2 teaspoons cloves, 2 teaspoons nutmeg, 3 3-4 cups fine dry bread crumbs, 2 cups firmly-packed dark brown sugar, 12 eggs.

Method: Rinse raisins and currants in hot water; drain. Slice lemon peel, orange peel and citron thin. Chop almonds, Mix raisins, peels, citron and almonds with orange juice in a bowl or crock; cover and soak overnight. Next day sift together the flour, cinnamon, cloves and nutmeg; mix with bread crumbs. Cream shortening and sugar; beat in eggs thoroughly, two at a time; stir in flour mixture, then fruit mixture. Steam according to following directions. Makes 10 pounds pudding.

FOR INDIVIDUAL 2-pound puddings, cut 14-inch squares from white muslin; dip squares in boiling water to remove any sizing. Spread a square of muslin on pastry board and measure 2 pounds (about 4 cups) of the pudding batter into the center of the cloth. Bring up the cloth around pudding, forming pudding into a ball and tie tightly at the top with string, leaving about 1-inch air space at the top for expansion.

Bring a kettle of water to a rolling boil, put in the puddings, cover and boil rapidly for 2 hours. (If you make smaller or larger puddings, boil 1 hour per pound.)

Remove the pudding to a cake rack to drain and cool. Store in tightly covered container. To reheat, steam about 1 hour, or until heated through.

CUT NEW squares of muslin, about 16-inches square for 2 pound puddings. Wrap the muslin-covered puddings in the new muslin squares; tie tightly at the top with string. Melt some paraffin a shallow container so it is about 1-inch deep; do not have it scalding hot.

Dip the bottom of the puddings in the melted paraffin and spoon paraffin over sides and top to make a complete seal. Decorate with Christmas greenery. Put a tag on each pudding saying that the outer muslin with its paraffin coating must be removed before the pudding is reheated for serving.

BAG AND BOIL this old fashioned plum pudding, the way Grandmother used to do. Coat it with glossy paraffin to give it that snowball look.

Pigeons Awed By Owl, But Only Slightly

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — The imitation owl bought to scare the pigeons off city hall was effective, but only to a point.

When the owl, with two sets of eyes, fore and aft, was put in the middle of the roof, the pigeons just retreated to the edge. Now the city is going to buy three more plastic owls— one for each corner of the roof.

Pictures that are left to accumulate and deteriorate in a box or drawer serve no pleasurable or useful purpose and are a waste of effort and materials.

By careful selection, good cropping and enlarging your pictures can come to life and become a part of your life. They can add a personal and decorative touch to the decor of the home.

Every camera fan should have a small picture gallery or bulletin board where the best of the latest efforts can go on display. Some will be worthy of framing for durable protection.

TODAY, many interior decorators favor a solid grouping of many framed photos over a large piece of furniture instead of scattering them around the room. Such an arrangement adds emphasis to the photographs and can be designed for artistic balance.

After gluing down on plywood or pressed board, the figure is cut out with a coping saw. The advantage of a simple outline will be understood at this point.

After sanding the edges, a triangular block of wood is glued or tacked to the back as a base suppor. to make it stand up.

Besides being one method of making messy backgrounds disappear, these photo figurines will decorate mantelpiece, book shelf, piano or baby's room with a conversation-piece touch. They might also find a practical use as placecards at the Christmas dinner or indicate the proper individual gift piles for the family at the base of the Yule tree.

COLOR SLIDE fans can live with their transparencies also in picture frame view. One of the newest transparency illuminators can stand as an easel or hang like a frame. Die-cut mats are available so that up to 48 openings can be punched out to frame 35mm transparencies. Other die-cut mats are designed for groups of 2 ¼ inch square of 4 x 5 inch transparencies. It's surprising how interesting your color transparencies look when displayed with this exhibition-like touch.

GIFT WRAP MAGIC—For Christmas packages choose gift wrappings that lend distinction to your gifts. It can be done effectively with materials not ordinarily considered as gift wrappings. The decorative covering is available in a variety of favorite Christmas colors.

Traditional Dutch Santa Even Rides a Scooter

St. Nicholas Comes to Amsterdam

By JOSEPH WHITT

AMSTERDAM, Holland — Along a street in Amsterdam rolls a motor scooter with two strangely dressed passengers. The driver, a man with a flowing white beard, wears long scarlet and white robes, has a miter on his head, and carries a golden crosier.

The rider on the back seat is a blackamoor decker out in a plumed hat and the velvet costume of a Seventeeth Century page.

As the scooter moves along the street, Dutch boys and girls on the sidewalks stare at it in amazement. Finally one of them cries, "Where's the white horse?"

This is Sinterklaas (also known as St. Nicholas and as Santa Claus in America) and his servant, Black Peter, in 1957. Caught up in modern ways, the legendary figure has switched from a horse to a scooter.

However, so as not to destroy any child's dream, the number one St. Nicholas—as opposed to his numerous countrywide copies—entered Amsterdam in his traditional manner.

ST. NICHOLAS, so Dutch children have learned, lives in Spain and once a year comes to Holland to see his friends and to distribute gifts. This year, as usual, he kept his promise.

He arrived on a boat in Amsterdam, the city of which he is the patron saint. From the deck of the streamer he saw the church named in his honor and he heard thousands of people on the quays singing the well-known songs of welcome.

When the steamer docked, the burgomaster (mayor) and other officials went aboard to greet him. Not deviating from tradition, he mounted his white horse for a processional ride through the heart of Amsterdam.

This parade, like the parades that greet Santa Claus in the United States, contained bands, amusing characters and numerous floats expressing fictional and historic themes.

HOWEVER, the eager children had eyes only for Sinterklaas and his faithful servant, Black Peter, who danced and hopped about while distributing candies.

The entry into Amsterdam this land of windmills and wooden shoes. St. Nicholases crop up in every town.

Parties are held in schools, clubs, hospitals and, of course, in the homes—where ever there are children.

ALL THESE festivities lead up to the great evening in the beginning of December—the evening St. Nicholas rides over roof-tops and drops gifts in all Dutch homes. His air journey is made on a white horse rather than on the familiar sled drawn by reindeer. To be kind to the hardworking horse children leave some food for him in their shoes and set them in front of the fireplace. Black Peter slips down the chimney and exchanges presents for the hay or carrots in the shoes.

Black Peter, it should be noted, not only carries a huge sack of gifts, but also a bundle of twigs to be used for punishing the not-so-good children.

As the special boat comes into Amsterdam harbor, the children will go on singing the traditional song of greeting:

Look yonder the steamer from Spain on its way
It brings us St. Nicholas and Peter so gay,
On deck his white horse waits to come near,

Santa: Behind the Beard, What?

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

Paunchy, bearded, florid-faced Santa Claus, the benevolent bagman who makes a business out of dropping down people's chimneys on one night of every year, has remained one of history's most mysterious, elusive characters.

Thousands upon thousands of words have been written about him, but he has never submitted to an interview.

Artists, sculptors, cartoonists and window dressers by the hundreds have attempted to capture his likeness for posterity, but no recognizable photograph is known to exist of him.

CHILDREN by the million have witnessed his incredible sleight of hand feats on Christmas morning, but he has never been apprehended in the act of breaking and entering to distribute the wares of his workshop.

The exact location of this workshop, a massive underground toy factory operating night and day on year-round basis somewhere in the frozen wastes of the artic, has never been discovered, despite repeated polar expeditions by Peary Amundsen, Ellsworth and Byrd.

WHERE DOES Santa recruit his help? Are they union or non-union? Who supplies the raw materials for his immense foundries and assembly lines?

Has this top-of-the-world Christmas cartel long ago mastered the secrets of the atom? Or does it run on solar energy in a land where half the year there is no sun?

What right does he have to monopolize the minds and hearts of people for one whole day every year, depriving them of their long treasured hates and prejudices? Who gives him safe conduct down the chimneys of the world?

These are questions that never have been answered but will crop up again as he sets out on his nocturnal mission once more this Christmas Eve.

TRAVELLING under aliases like Kris Kringle, Jolly Old Elf, Good St. Nick and just plain Santa, this shy, retiring virtually unknown undercover man has tested the patience and credulity of millions since time immemorial.

Does he really exist? Will he come again this year?

The known facts about this most wanted and most sought after character are slim and sketchy.

HE HAS BEEN described as being short (perhaps a midget), fat (some liken his abdomen to a gelatinous substance), rosy cheeked; is given to fits of prolonged and immoderate laughter, drives his eight reindeer sled in a reckless fashion, and has been occasionally observed smoking a long Dutch pipe.

The latest reports are that he wears gaudy red trousers, jacket and mittens, trimmed in white fur, a black leather belt with gold buckle, and black patent leather boots.

His most distinguishing characterics are a long flowing white beard and a ruddy, bulbous nose. He is said to be about middle aged, and has been for several centuries.

HE IS KNOWN to be armed (with a bottomless bag of presents) and dangerous (in his insistence on spreading good cheer in every direction even where none is wanted).

An all points bulletin has been broadcast for his speedy apprehension, and this year steps are being taken to trace his movements as he crosses the radar network of the Distant Early Warning system in Canada.

Object: to wish him a Merry Christmas.

Persons having information as to his whereabouts are urged to hang their stockings by the mantle, try not to panic, get a good night's sleep and await further developments.

"And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

So the Holy Book tells us of shepherds who watched by night, with hope and joy for all mankind.

It is our sincerest wish that the wonder of the Christmas story bring to

New Art Books Celebrate Nativity

By W. G. ROGERS
(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, (AP)—The unique sensuous pleasurers that art offers, and the immortal lessons it teaches—and teaches so painlessly—are available during all four seasons, but we are never so aware of them as right now.

There are two reasons:

We are about to celebrate the anniversary of the Nativity, and paintings of it have been shown to us constantly in these last weeks; it was the favorite subject of many great masters.

And secondly, though museums are always with us, this is the particular month when art books flood from the publishers.

The gift habit makes it possible to print and also sell thousands and thousands of expensive volumes which at other times might be priced right off the bookstore shelves.

THESE TWO VOLUMES, for instance, "Flemish Painting: The Century of Van Eyck," by Jacques Lassiagne and "Early Medieval Painting, from the Fourth to the 11th Century," by Andre Grabar and Carl Nordenfalk, both published by Skira, contain mostly reproductions of pictures whose meanings are intensified for the devout of all faiths at this time of year.

Though it is not a religious work, one of the loveliest paintings in our western heritage was chosen to decorate beautifully the jacket of "Flemish Painting:" van der Weyden's "Portrait of a Lady," with the flaring gauzy cap, the placid features with lowered eyes, the fine aristocratic clasped fingers.

Lassiagne's text, a model of inspired scholarship, has to do with art, attributions and identifications: Jan van Eyck may have had no brother Hubert at all, Petrus Christus' learning may be traceable to an unidentified peer of Jan's, Robert Campin and the Master of Flemalle seem to have been the same person.

"HIERONYMUS BOSCH," by Jacques Combe (Pierre Tisne-Universe Books) is a reminder that Bosch belonged like van Eyck to the 15th Century.

We know less about him, even than about the others, though he has in some ways a more distinctly modern flavor; surrealists have not hestitated to claim him as the earliest member of their febrile band, and Combe speculates interestingly on his fantastic imagination.

For examples of "Early Medieval," authors Grabar and Norgraphers, north to Scotland and Ireland and south to Rome and Monte Cassino.

This is a new collection in a neglected field, and is no less important in scholarship than in its handsome appearance.

"VIRGIN AND CHILD" (detail) from "Flemish Painting: The Century of Van Eyck," by Jacques Lassaigne (Skira). This 15th Century work, in the Frick collection in New York, is by Van Eyck, with possible traces of the hand of Petrus Christus.

THERE IS a more mundane air about the most important of the new Abrams publications: "Art Treasurers of the Pinakothek," by Ernst Buchner. The different tone is signalized on the jacket; contrasted with van der Weyden's "Lady," this bears Rubens's "Helena Fourment in her Wedding Dress," in rich colors, a burst of jewels and a lavish expanse of satins and silks.

The book concerns Munich's reopened Pinakothek, containing works of historic significance from all over Germany and from the suous pleasurers that art offers, Italy. The test is largely a catalog, and an invaluable one, by the director of the Bavarian State Collections.

Geoffrey Grigson's pairing volume, "Art Treasures of the British Museum," also published by Abrams, is both catalog and sympathetic history of the far-ranging collections.

Other aspects of art are handsomely represented in library selections this fall, and they too come with illustrations in color or black and white, and with excellent tests:

"Three Hundred Years of American Painting," by Alexander Eliot, art editor of Time magazine, introduction by John Walker, with 250 illustrations (Random House); Eliot is a generous editor with as warm a welcome for Grandma Moses as for Jackson Pollock, for Sargent and Whistler from London as Remington and Russell in the West; he also provides constantly lively comment.

"Indian Art of Mexico and Central America," by Miguel Covarrubias, both author and illustrator of this superb posthumous work (Knopf).

THREE BOOKS that somewhat overlap: "German Expressionism and Abstract Art: The Harvard Collections," by Charles L. Kuhn (Harvard); "Modern German Painting," by Hans Konrad Roethel (Reyna'); and "German Art of the 20th Century," by Werner Haftman, Alfred Hentzen and William S. Lieberman, edited by Andrew Carnduff Ritchie (Museum of Modern Art-Simon & Schuster).

"Degas Sculpture," photos by Leonard von Matt, text by John Rewald, and "Paul Gauguin," by Robert Goldwater, both Abrams books.

By W. G. ROGERS
(By The Associated Press)

NEW YORK, (AP)—The unique sensuous pleasurers that art offers, and the immortal lessons it teaches—and teaches so painlessly—are available during all four seasons, but we are never so aware of them as right now.

There are two reasons:

We are about to celebrate the anniversary of the Nativity, and paintings of it have been shown to us constantly in these last weeks; it was the favorite subject of many great masters.

And secondly, though museums are always with us, this is the particular month when art books flood from the publishers.

The gift habit makes it possible to print and also sell thousands and thousands of expensive volumes which at other times might be priced right off the bookstore shelves.

THESE TWO VOLUMES, for instance, "Flemish Painting: The Century of Van Eyck," by Jacques Lassiagne and "Early Medieval Painting, from the Fourth to the 11th Century," by Andre Grabar and Carl Nordenfalk, both published by Skira, contain mostly reproductions of pictures whose meanings are intensified for the devout of all faiths at this time of year.

Though it is not a religious work, one of the loveliest paintings in our western heritage was chosen to decorate beautifully the jacket of "Flemish Painting:" van der Weyden's "Portrait of a Lady," with the flaring gauzy cap, the placid features with lowered eyes, the fine aristocratic clasped fingers.

Lassiagne's text, a model of inspired scholarship, has to do with art, attributions and identifications: Jan van Eyck may have had no brother Hubert at all, Petrus Christus' learning may be traceable to an unidentified peer of Jan's, Robert Campin and the Master of Flemalle seem to have been the same person.

"HIERONYMUS BOSCH," by Jacques Combe (Pierre Tisne-Universe Books) is a reminder that Bosch belonged like van Eyck to the 15th Century.

We know less about him, even than about the others, though he has in some ways a more distinctly modern flavor; surrealists have not hestitated to claim him as the earliest member of their febrile band, and Combe speculates interestingly on his fantastic imagination.

For examples of "Early Medieval," authors Grabar and Norgraphers, north to Scotland and Ireland and south to Rome and Monte Cassino.

'Twas the Night before Christmas

HELLO SANTA! This small charmer is all dressed up for Christmas Eve in a dainty pastel pin-checked topper set, designed by Carter. It has frilled top and plasticized pants.

WAITING FOR ST. NICK . . . This young loiterer is wearing a jama-blanket in acrilan blanket cloth, with elasticized ankles and plastic soles, ready for Christmas morning.

By DOROTHY ROE

Some Christmas gifts can be given in advance, to heighten the magic and joy of that most wonderful night in the year, the night before Christmas.

This is the time when parents are inclined to relax the ordinary rules a little, and let the littest children join the family circle even after their regular bedtime.

And this is the time when warm new pajamas and gay rompers add to the general festivity.

Even the toddlers enter into the spirit of the evening, and although they may not understand everything that's going on, they know something wonderful is about to happen. And dressing for the occasion is part of the fun.

PERFECT for Christmas morning and the night before is a jama-blanket—sleepers made out of acrilan blanket cloth, complete with feet with plastic soles that keep small toes warm and snug.

Thus attired, small fry can romp to their hearts' content, go off to bed to dream of sugarplums, and be ready to see what Santa Claus brought in the morning.

For feminine members of the playpen set there are soft, pretty new cotton-knit topper sets consisting of a ruffly little dress with plasticized snap-fastened panties beneath. These come in pastel checks, and are right for either creeping or sleeping.

TOYS, of course, must be saved for Christmas morning, but there's one beforehand gift - something to wear on the night before Christmas.

Dude Ranches Will Bank On Romance

DENVER (AP)—Members of the Colorado Dude and Guest Ranch Assn., in town for their winter convention, unslung their git-tars and sang a plaintive Westerr tune.

It was a song telling of a drop in tourist arrivals last summer and empty saddles in the dude ranch corral.

But they intend to do something about it. They called upon R. E. Venuti, executive secretary to cook up some publicity angles.

A. B. Patterson, an association official, supplied one lead. He said romance isn't hard to find under a Western moon at a dude ranch.

"I'd say Colorado's dude ranches offer more love-hungry females per square mile than Hollywood and Miami Beach put together," he said.

It's got to the point that the ranches have a tough time keeping their male help. The shortage of guitar-playing cowboys is acute. The going rate is $175 a month, plus board and room and the admiration of Eastern girls out West for a good time.

MRS. MARY KUNS who with her husband Dick, operates a dude spread near Durango, Colo., agrees with Patterson. Mrs. Kuns confided she came out here from Philadelphia, went overboard for her Western-type husband-to-b. and married him during World War II

What do dude ranchers do in the winter? Patterson operates an automobile rental business in Denver. A few have cattle or sheep that keep them busy. But most of them pack their summer work clothes and take a vacation at a winter sports resort.

The device would be activated by a control point through the power system of a community instead of a telephone service. It is expected to be tested in 900 homes in Battle Creek, Mich., within a few months.

Help Children Learn Real Joy of Giving

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gaily wrapped presents poking out from under a Christmas tree, whispered secrets, excited children, these are some of the memories of childhood cherished for a lifetime.

The giving of presents can be an expression of love, a real desire to please and make another happy—but all too often in our tense complicated society the giving of presents becomes a duty, an unpleasant chore that burdens the giver with obligations.

It is hard to say "I Love You" except, perhaps, during a brief period of romantic love and yet we all want to be loved.

Children who grow up in a family that has found means of expressing the deep enduring respect and affection they have for each other often can carry into their own adult life not only the capacity to love but the techniques of making others feel their love.

THE GIVING of presents is only one of many ways of saying "I love you, your happiness is important to me," but it's one of the very nicest ways.

Presents given this way are thought about in advance, they are selected with care and appreciation of the receivers' taste and desires.

They say: "Your happiness and pleasure mean so much to me that I want to give you of myself."

The cost in money of such presents is no measure of their real value. Sometimes they are costly — a man may skimp on lunch or go without cigarettes to save enough to get his wife a wrist watch for Christmas.

But real presents do not have to be costly. A needed shelf in the kitchen could carry the same warmth and love and cost but a fraction of what the watch cost.

HELP the children learn the joy of giving. Explain to them what Christmas is all about, how it makes you feel nice inside to please someone else. Children love to please the people they love.

Encourage the children to make gifts for the family or let them take their small accumulated wealth and select something in a store.

Chris at the age of 7 discovered a little China horse in a store window, and cried:

"He is so lively and jumpy. I just know Anne would love him!"

Chris went in by himself and priced the horse. Joy of joys, it cost 25 cents and he could buy it for his big sister.

We want our children to grow up with a knowledge in their hearts of the spirit of love of Him whose birthday we celebrate. It can be done.

IT'S SO EASY TO PLACE A WANT AD.

Animal Crackers And Fudge For Christmas

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Assoc. Press Food Editor

The sweetest and trickiest idea we've come upon this year is Animal Cracker Fudge. Small fry will be enchanted with it and grownups won't mind eating it either.

The fudge is a light milk-chocolate color with good flavor and just— creamy-enough texture The small animal cracker atop each square tastes delicious with the sweet rich candy underneath.

If you try this recipe we think you'll agree with us that it's a great one for youngsters' parties at holiday time and the whole year through. You can vary the garnish by choosing crackers or cookies to suit your party theme—at Christmas time star- shaped cookies are perfect. For a Cowboy and Indian party, use cookies that picture these themes.

ANIMAL CRACKER FUDGE

Ingredients: 4 squares (1 ounce each) unsweetened chocolate, 1 1-3 cups evaporated milk (undiluted), 4 cups sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ cup butter or margarine, 2 teaspoons vanilla, 12 medium-sized (about 1¼ cups) marshmallows (diced), 16 small animal crackers.

Method: Put chocolate and undiluted evaporated milk in a medium - sized saucepan. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until chocolate melts; beat with rotary beater to blend chocolate.

Add sugar and salt. Cook, stirring often, until sugar is dissolved and mixture reaches boiling point. Cook, without stirring, to 238 degrees on a candy thermometer (soft ball stage). Remove from heat. Add butter and vanilla. Cool without stirring to 110 degrees on a candy thermometer (lukewarm). Beat until mixture is creamy and loses gloss. Spread half of fudge into buttered pan (8 by 8 by 2 inches). Sprinkle with marshmallows. Spread with remaining fudge. Space animal crackers evenly over fudge, pressing down. Makes 16 two - inch pieces.

Too Late For Church, Bath Wasted Effort

After relating that he and his father spent the day flying model airplanes, Max reported:

"When we came home it was time to go to evening church. My mother made me take a bath. But when I was done, it was too late to go to church. So I had taken a bath for nothing."

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Safety first didn't pay for Rudy Vrba of St. Clairsville. Vrba extended his arm to signal a left turn while driving along Ohio 7— and had four fingers broken by a hat wielding youngster who leaned out of an auto traveling in the opposite direction.

Decorations Help Bring Yuletide into the Home

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

A creche on the mantle, unusual front door or window decorations, table centerpieces, and the tree itself are all symbols of Christmastide.

At this time Mom is so busy usually with gift wrappings, and food fixin's that decorations are a last-minute chore.

Home fashion elegance may be achieved with a minimum of effort, however, with sophisticated holiday decorations available at store counters.

A chic Christmas tree, for instance, in gold plastic is new and a different type of centerpiece, foyer or end table decoration. It may be hung with Christmas ornaments, used year after year. Three-dimensional snow flakes and gay little ornaments in gold plastic may be used in the window, strung on a tree or from a chandelier.

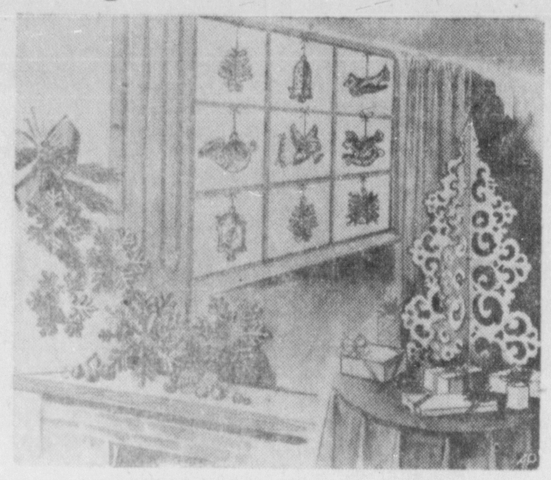
THE HOLIDAY TABLE can be made festive in many ways. Materials such as pine cones, cactus, pine, holly may be sprayed with gold and silver plastic paint, used as a centerpiece.



YULETIDE DECORATIONS . . . these are of plastic, handsome additions to the home, available in green or gold.

A small Christmas tree may be perked up with Christmas snow, sprayed from a container.

One window gimmick involves a "snowfall' machine. The unit is run by a switch, is transparent, sealed on all sides and may be fitted to the window easily, manufacturers say.

A lace tablecloth with an all-over design of holly leaves is effective over a red or green undercloth. Available in easy wash dacron and cotton, it may be sudsed and let drip-dry.

Your damask cloth may be given a Yuletide touch too with the addition of a red or green runner.

One scarlet runner is of felt-like fabric sporting prancing reindeer and glittering rhinestone stars. It is part of a hostess ensemble that includes place mats. Christmas tree skirt, wall hanging, gift stocking, hostess apron and a long panel for displaying Christmas cards. All items are washable in lukewarm suds.

One gold-fringed round table cloth made of a closely woven rayon-cotton blend has large gold snowflakes cavorting against a green or red background. More modern table settings include Christmas mats in opaque vinyl plastic with tasteful designs.These may be cleaned easily with a sudsy sponge.

Unusual Christmas lights are available for your tree this year. Tiny tree lights, a luxury item a few years ago, are now budget-priced. These lights have a fairy-land quality.

There are tiny nine-inch-high Yule trees, pre-trimmed with tiny baubles and lights powered by flashlight batteries, ideal for a child's room, or a welcoming glow on the front hall table.

UN Women Could Knit World Together

They say that many of the world's troubles would be settled, if the women of all nations could get together to trade recipes and do a little needlework.

For women can cook and sew and knit in all languages, and they need no interpreters.

Racial and national differences are forgotten as women from Pakistan and Haiti, from Yugoslavia and Japan, from Africa and America get together over their knitting needles.

The United Nation Women's Guild provides a common meeting ground for wives and daughters of delegates from all countries, and the busy fingers of the members have turned out thousands of warm knitted garments for children all over the world.

While heated debates and fierce arguments take place among the U. N. delegates, their wives meet in friendship to engage in woman-talk and "knit the world together."

Oklahoma Readies Music-mobile

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Books aren't the only thing that the Oklahoma State Library's new bookmobiles will be carrying soon to rural areas of the state.

Classical records including Beethoven and Brahams are going into the trucks equipped as libraries.

State Librarian Ralph Hudson said as far as he can learn, they will be the first in the country carrying records into rural areas.

Too Late For Church, Bath Wasted Effort

After relating that he and his father spent the day flying model airplanes, Max reported:

"When we came home it was time to go to evening church. My mother made me take a bath. But when I was done, it was too late to go to church. So I had taken a bath for nothing."

Decorations Help Bring Yuletide into the Home

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

A creche on the mantle, unusual front door or window decorations, table centerpieces, and the tree itself are all symbols of Christmastide.

At this time Mom is so busy usually with gift wrappings, and food fixin's that decorations are a last-minute chore.

Home fashion elegance may be achieved with a minimum of effort, however, with sophisticated holiday decorations available at store counters.

A chic Christmas tree, for instance, in gold plastic is new and a different type of centerpiece, foyer or end table decoration. It may be hung with Christmas ornaments, used year after year. Three-dimensional snow flakes and gay little ornaments in gold plastic may be used in the window, strung on a tree or from a chandelier.

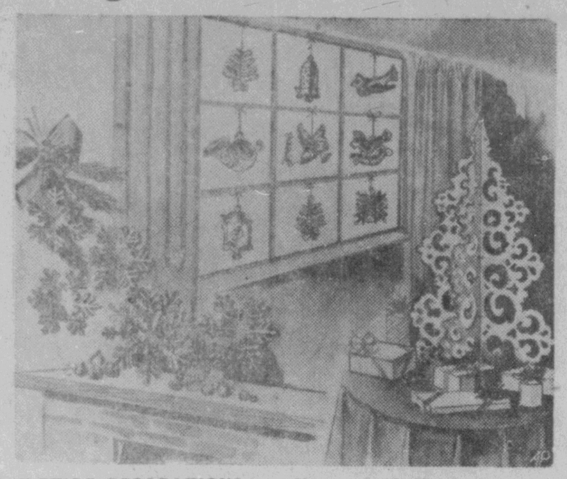
THE HOLIDAY TABLE can be made festive in many ways. Materials such as pine cones, cactus, pine, holly may be sprayed with gold and silver plastic paint, used as a centerpiece.



YULETIDE DECORATIONS . . . these are of plastic, handsome additions to the home, available in green or gold.

A small Christmas tree may be perked up with Christmas snow, sprayed from a container.

One window gimmick involves a "snowfall' machine. The unit is run by a switch, is transparent, sealed on all sides and may be fitted to the window easily, manufacturers say.

A lace tablecloth with an all-over design of holly leaves is effective over a red or green undercloth. Available in easy wash dacron and cotton, it may be sudsed and let drip-dry.

Your damask cloth may be given a Yuletide touch too with the addition of a red or green runner.

One scarlet runner is of felt-like fabric sporting prancing reindeer and glittering rhinestone stars. It is part of a hostess ensemble that includes place mats. Christmas tree skirt, wall hanging, gift stocking, hostess apron and a long panel for displaying Christmas cards. All items are washable in lukewarm suds.

One gold-fringed round table cloth made of a closely woven rayon-cotton blend has large gold snowflakes cavorting against a green or red background. More modern table settings include Christmas mats in opaque vinyl plastic with tasteful designs. These may be cleaned easily with a sudsy sponge.

Unusual Christmas lights are available for your tree this year. Tiny tree lights, a luxury item a few years ago, are now budget-priced. These lights have a fairy-land quality.

There are tiny nine-inch-high Yule trees, pre-trimmed with tiny baubles and lights powered by flashlight batteries, ideal for a child's room, or a welcoming glow on the front hall table.

UN Women Could Knit World Together

They say that many of the world's troubles would be settled, if the women of all nations could get together to trade recipes and do a little needlework.

For women can cook and sew and knit in all languages, and they need no interpreters.

Racial and national differences are forgotten as women from Pakistan and Haiti, from Yugoslavia and Japan, from Africa and America get together over their knitting needles.

The United Nation Women's Guild provides a common meeting ground for wives and daughters of delegates from all countries, and the busy fingers of the members have turned out thousands of warm knitted garments for children all over the world.

While heated debates and fierce arguments take place among the U. N. delegates, their wives meet in friendship to engage in woman-talk and "knit the world together."

Nine 'Little Towns of Bethlehem' In U.S. Are Living Up to Names

By JOHN F. SEMBOWER

"O, Little Town of Bethlehem, How Still We See Thee Lie."
—Old Christmas Carol.

Nine "little towns of Bethlehem" and one not-so-small city proudly wearing that name borrow much of the spirit and atmosphere of the original Bethlehem for the United States during the Christmas season.

Although some of the Bethlehems consist of only a few houses, the citizens of each community give ample indication that they feel a special responsibility to carry on tradition which impelled the founders to choose that name, and for weeks some of their postmarks have been girdling the globe as a special embellishment for Yuletide cards and packages.

The thriving industrial city of Bethlehem, Pa.,,with a population of 70,000, is by far the most uban of the namesakes of the City of the Nativity, but none keeps brighter a community tradi t i on linked with its Old World name.

Founded in December, 1741, by religious exiles from Bohemia and Moravia, who came to America under the leadership of Bishop David Nitschmann, influenced by Count Zinsendorf, Bethlehem, Pa., again centers its Christmas celebration this year about the historic Central Moravian church, where on Christmas Eve the story of the Nativity will be told again in the Moravian traditional manner, as it has been done without interruption for 214 years.

BESIDES the special accent on Christmas there is little comparison, however, between the Pennsylvania city and modern Bethlehem in Israel. That ancient town site first was garrisoned by the Philistines in the time of Saul and was the early home of David.

Old Bethlehem had fallen into obscurity, from which it emerged gloriously on the night when Jesus was born. Three hundred years later it was again a virtual wilderness, but it was hallowed ground for the Crusaders who helped to revive it.

Today it is a relatively prosperous city of less than 10,000 population with many good houses, and is almost a suburb of Jerusalem only five miles to the north, although it is across the line in Jordan.

The Grotto of the Nativity there is one of the great religious shrines of the earth, and the chief occupation is the manufacture and sale of mementoes made from mother-of-pearl, olive wood, and "Dead sea stone."

The atmosphere of Bethlehem remains largely pastoral, and it has this in common with most of

AT BETHLEHEM, N. H., summer vacationers who swell the population to 6,000 are gone and on Christmas Eve the 1,000 year-round residents will listen to caroling groups of high school students making traditional tours along snowy roads in the White mountains.

The small post office has been handling about a thousand extra pieces of mail each day, and decorating them with a special cachet since Dec. 1.

Bethlehem, Conn., a rural village of 1,200, does the liveliest Christmas mail business of any of the Bethlehems in the New World.

During the last two weeks before Christmas, it remailed more than 250,000 cards and packages to all parts of the English-speaking world.

That task done, the citizens will gather on Christmas Eve around a lighted creche on the village green, a community project, and in the crisp winter air mark the Nativity of Christ.

For some reason, mail never has been directed in volume to Bethlehem, Ga., so that there has been some concern in that community of 300 lest the post office would be closed. Christmas is celebrated there in the Bethlehem Baptist church.

In Bethlehem, Miss., there is no suggestion of snow in the air for the 40 persons in the hamlet, but they pride themselves on "celebrating Christmas just like people everywhere."

THE WESTMISTER YOUTH organization takes charge of the carol singing each year as Bethlehem, W. Va., a town of 1,600, marks the season. In Bethlehem, Ky., the 150 persons in the community celebrate Christmas quietly in the Bethlehem Baptist and Bethlehem Methodist churches.

The Ohio river community of Bethlehem, Ind., population about 1,200, follows Old World customes, of caroling, often in costumes, as part of traditions dating back many years in southern Indiana and Illinois communities.

Next-to-the-smallest Bethlehem of them all—Bethlehem, Md., with only 30 homes and a hundred residents—has one of the warmest traditions for how it got its name.

It was named for a star, seen by Francis Asbury, the first Methodist bishop in the United States, when he first visited the scene 150 years ago.

THE TINIEST Bethlehem—Bethlehem, La., with only 25 persons still living there, also proudly wears its Christmas tradition.

A stopping place in 1846 for Mormon wagon trains, homesick travelers gave it the name on a Christmas Eve when it had more than 300 residents.

There is not even a post office there anymore, but there still are a few houses and the inevitable church, where on Christmas Eve the children will stage an annual pageant, their eyes shining all the brighter because they, too, are in Bethlehem!

You Can Make Your Very Own Santa Stocking

FELT STOCKING.... Easy to make and decorative to use.

It's fun to make a Santa Claus stocking out of bright red felt, decorate it with machine embroidery and sequins, and hang it on the mantel. Such a stocking may be used year after year, making a family tradition.

Make one for each member of the family, and machine embroider a name on each. It all adds to the festivity of Christmas.

A standard pattern is available with magic blue transfers for Santa's face and the other decorations. Local sewing center experts say only a quarter yard of red felt and a 6 by 9-inch piece of white felt are required for each stocking, plus a handful of sequins.

IF YOU USE the pattern, simply iron the transfer designs onto the felt and follow directions for cutting out the stocking. Use pinking shears to cut out the felt.

Santa's eyes may be done with machine embroidery or with a pair of shiny black buttons.

Use a bright pink pompon for the nose, and use the white felt for beard, eyebrows and the trimming on his cap.

Paris Fetes Chic Catherinettes

By JOSEPH WHITT

PARIS, France — Colette lives in Paris. She is 25 years old, unmarried, and works as a seamstress in an haute couture fashion house.

These qualifications make her eligible to be a Catherinette—a once-a-year hunter for a husband, a candidate for a French 24-hour "Leap Year."

"Paris has set aside a special day for seamstresses, sales girls and models who have reached that certain age—you undertand, no?—and still don't have a mate," Colette said, smiling wistfully. "This is called the holiday of the Catherinettes."

DEDICATED to St. Catherine, the holiday is a time for bachelorgirls to wear yellow and green as a sign of their interest and availability.

To make sure they are not overlooked, the girls also create fancy costumes and bizarre bonnets which they don for a stroll along the Champs-Elysees.

Once this holiday was celebrated throughout France, but nowadays it is observed mainly in the houses of Paris counturiers who set styles for women all around the world.

FOR NUMEROUS girls who work behind the gilt-and-gray walls of the plush salons this is a moment to shine and the couturiers—Maggy Rouff, Jean Desses, Pierre Balmain and others make it a day to remember.

In the morning, before the festivities begin, the girls go to the statue of St. Catherine in the Rue de Clery and place flower wreaths at her feet as tokens of good luck in their matrimonial search.

THEN the girls go to their fashion houses. The ateliers, or workrooms, are decorated according to some theme—an Apache lair of former days, the Moulin Rouge, a country outing along the Seine.

All the decorations are made from scraps and snippets ordinarily thrown away by the house.

The couturier visits the work rooms," Colette said, "and crowns each of us with a bonnet we made ourselves. These bonnets are symbols of bachelorgirlhood—if you know what I mean.

"Then the courturier sips champagne with us and sheds a few happy tears. In the salons where weathy women and clothing manufacturers come to select gowns, we receive gifts, are served refreshments, and listen to an orchestra playing. Our atelier was turned into the Moulin Rouge and we all danced the can-can."

AFTER THESE shop parties, many of the girls are taken to dinner at expensive restaurants, then to the theater, and finally to a dance.

As the start disappear in the dawn, some of the Catherinettes may be walking along the boulevards, singing gay songs, and dancing around some startled stray gentleman.

"Somewhere on this trail of festivities," Colette said, "they hope to meet the eligible man who'll bring to an end their being Catherinettes."

Colette adjusted her bonnet—a fanciful creation of silk and wire and playful figurines—smiled again and set off in search of a Catherinette's dream.

Christmas Tree Fire Hazard if You're Careless

COLUMBUS — Christmas trees are a potential fire hazard and are indoors, warns W. E. Stuckey, extension safety specialist at Ohio State University.

He suggests purchasing a freshly cut tree which has been stored out - of - doors and keeping it outside standing in water or snow until needed. It is always a good idea to buy the tree a week or 10 days early so that it has time to soak up ample water before taking it into a warm, dry house.

To prepare the tree for indoor use, saw off the butt end at an angle about one inch above the original cut. Also cut vertical grooves into the bark of the tree trunk so that it can draw up more water. The tree will stay attractive and green and will be less flammable.

STUCKEY ALSO suggests these safety measures:

Support the Christmas tree well so that it cannot be knocked over.

Place the tree away from the doorways so it does not block the exist. If it should catch fire near a doorway, the family would be trapped.

It is dangerous to set up an electric train under the tree. The metal tinsel trimming the tree may fall on the tracks causing a spark from the electricity and ignite the lower branches.

When the tree becomes dry and needles start to fall, remove it from your home and destroy it safely. If the tree is left lying in the yard, children may cart away all the trees in the neighborhood to start a bonfire. These dry trees will flame up and out of control in seconds, warns the safety specialist.

Don't Break New Year's Resolution

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Beauty Editor

Try some indistructible glue to get your New Year's resolutions permanently stuck in your noggin' this year. (You can try, can't you.)

No matter what you resolve—take the positive approach. Don't be a double negative, like one girl who resolved "to lend nothing to nobody" in 1958. It seems her borrowed things were never returned.

HERE'S A sample lot for soul searching. After all, the idea of the resolutions is to improve you, not the other fellow.

1. How are you with small folk in your home? Are you impatient with the little fry or do you try to get along with them for the sake of keeping peace with the family?

. . Are you short-tempered with ma, pa, and grandparents when they make suggestions you consider fuddy-duddy? Or do you thank them, anyway, even though you don't go along with ideas?

3. Do you go out of your way to ridicule people who are in authority, just because you resent it? The pattern usually runs to teachers, bosses, parents.

4. Are you the complaining type who never gets things the way she wants them. This goes for anything from well-done beef to a dress that mother makes?

5. What's wrong with your date appeal? Are you the bossy type who always wants things your own way? A boy who is paying the freight may like to make a decision once in a while.

6. Do you ever think of others or do you concentrate all your thoughts on yourself? Do you give your old clothes to less fortunate people? Do you help out sick friends or those who are broke if you can afford it?

7. Are you friendly to animals or do you consider them a waste of time?

8. Are you a story carrier without knowing whether the gossip is true? And even if it is true, do you consider the damage done by idle gossip you peddle?

9. Do you ever do a kindness anonymously or do you demand lots of gratitude for your little favors?

10. Are you the introspective type who sits and nibbles at ice box goodies, candies, and cookies for want of a hobby or other interest, and gains pound after pound, day after day?

11. Do you talk about going on a diet, and bore your friends constantly with your chatter on the subject, and then ever do anything about it?

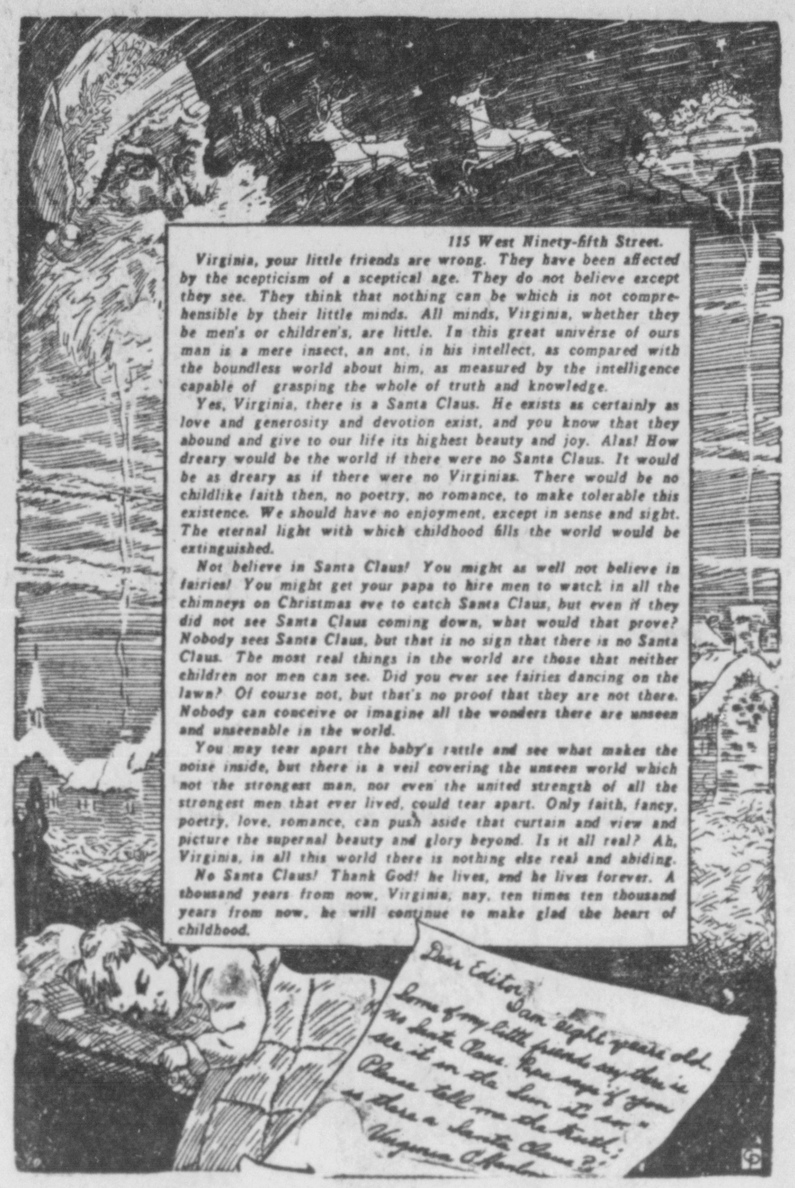
There Is A Santa Claus

Here is that wonderful editorial, "There Is a Santa Claus," written by Francis P. Church, of the New York Sun editorial staff, back in 1897. The Record-Herald believes that no better Christmas editorial will ever be written.

A little New York girl, Virginia O'Hanlon, (now Mrs. Edward M. Douglas, of New York City), had written of her doubts and her friends' doubts about Santa Claus to the Sun, then edited by one of the greatest newspapermen that ever wielded a pen, Charles A. Dana, and Church's answering editorial has ever since been reprinted year after year by editors all over the United States, and even in many foreign countries, because it so truly presents the Christmas spirit.



115 West Ninety-fifth Street.

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the scepticism of a sceptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to our life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseenable in the world.

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God! he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

Favorite Christmas Carols Originated In Many Countries

Three of America's favorite carols were brought here by early settlers from European lands. England contributed "God Rest You Merry Gentlemen." France gave this country "Cantique de Noel," and from Germany came "Away in a Manger."

"Adeste Fideles" belongs to no one country, but has been translated into 119 different languages and dialects.

Three Americans enriched the heritage of carols. The earliest contribution, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" was made by Edmund H. Sears in 1849; Dr. John Henry Hopkins Jr., in 1859 composed "We Three Kings of Orient Are," and in 1868 "O Little Town of Bethlehem" was written by Philip Brooks.

Christmas Season Can Be Hazardous

Little careless acts— that seem so unimportant at the time — are the cause of death or some accident which mars the spirit of joy that should accompany the holiday.

Tragedies — especially at Christmas — are needless, so take a moment to think about the dangers that may be present in the home.

Christmas trees cause many fires, so choose your tree wisely. Don't buy a larger tree than your family needs, and be sure it isn't dried out.

The many and varied assortment of lights now being used to decorate Christmas trees can, if not properly handled, cause an electrical fire.

Be sure you use only electric lighting sets that have been properly approved.

Christmas time has a lot of "do it yourself" tasks about the house. Watch out for frayed wires, loose connections and broken sockets on Christmas tree lights.

Man Hours Can Help At Christmas Party

GET THAT MAN INTO THE ACT . . . Entertaining is easy if man of family helps. Use gay paper plates for serving tidbits.

By VIVIAN BROWN

The real roadblocks you'll face before a Yuletide party are the two-legged kind— Dad and the young fry. If you can keep them out from underfoot without curbing their holiday exuberance, you may even enjoy entertaining your guests.

Out of the house or into the act are your only alternatives as far as the family is concerned when you are preparing for company.

Put the children to cleaning their own rooms. Give them upstairs or downstairs chores, depending on where you are not. (Be prepared to pick up after them a few minutes before your guests arrive.)

The man of the family is a good candidate for help, providing you respect his admiration for big chores, preferably those that take him outdoors— gathering wood, washing windows, arranging tree lights, putting up door wreaths. Get him to prepare ice cubes early, load the cooler.

RISE and shine the silver, make the hors d'oeurves, put flowers or leaves in bowls or vases, gather up ash trays, check the closet for coat space and hangers while the rest of the family snores in the morning. A minute saved at this time is an hour earned later.

Prepare for the worst. . . .

1. Keep ashtrays in the kitchen until company arrives— a man can use every clean ashtray for one cigarette just before the guests press the door buzzer.

2. Put the hors d'oeuvres in a safe place, and well covered or you may find nothing but olive pits when the time comes to serve. Those lovely canape patterns mean nothing to a hungry man.

3. Serve potato chips, nuts and canapes on paper plates. A man is a sure - fire dish breaker. There is none better.

4. Did he take a shower? Check the bathroom when you hear your first guest's car. You may find guest towels thrown on a wet floor, piles of clothes, messy soap trays.

5. Final instructions to the menage might be these: Help with the guests' coats. . . someone stay in the room when Mom goes into the kitchen (never happens). . . . let the guests choose the entertainment— hi-fi, games, TV, cards. don't open cluttered closets and drawers. . . .ask the man of the house to refrain from yawning when everyone's having a good time.

Just Any Poor Fish Knows It's the Wiggle

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — A. P. Richards, who operates a worm ranch as a sideline, has this advice for fishermen after several underwater trips observing both worm and fish:

"Hook the worm in the middle and let it wiggle around. It's the wiggle that taunts the fish to bite."

How To Plant A Live Tree After Holiday

The roots generally are burlap balled upon delivery. Place the tree in a tub and pour cold water over the ball. After it has been well soaked, wrap the ball in a plastic sheet and tie it loosely around the stem. Grasping the ball not the branches, place the tree in a container. Occasionally open the plastic and add more water. Keep the tree away from the heat of a radiator.

Plant the tree outdoors the week-end after Christmas. Prepare the hole in advance. Dig it the same depth as the ball and a foot wider.

Finally, spread a mulch over the root area. If the tree has been planted at a windy corner of the house, erect a protecting screen to mute harsh winter winds.

Tiny Trees for Tots Easy To Make

It's easy and inexpensive to make and will lend a festive air to any room in the house, den as well as nursery.

HERE'S WHAT your Johnny or Suzie—or you—will need to make a colorful, holiday tree:

Turn the box or can upside down and securely mount the socket in an upright position (see picture). Screw in light bulb. This will provide a firm base over which to place the foil tree.

IF YOUR USING a small table lamp, simply remove the shade and you will be ready to place the foil tree over the entire lamp.

To make the tree, take a piece of brown wrapping paper or a sheet of newspaper and first make a pattern by drawing a circle eight inches in diameter. Cut the circle out and form into a cone shaped tree.

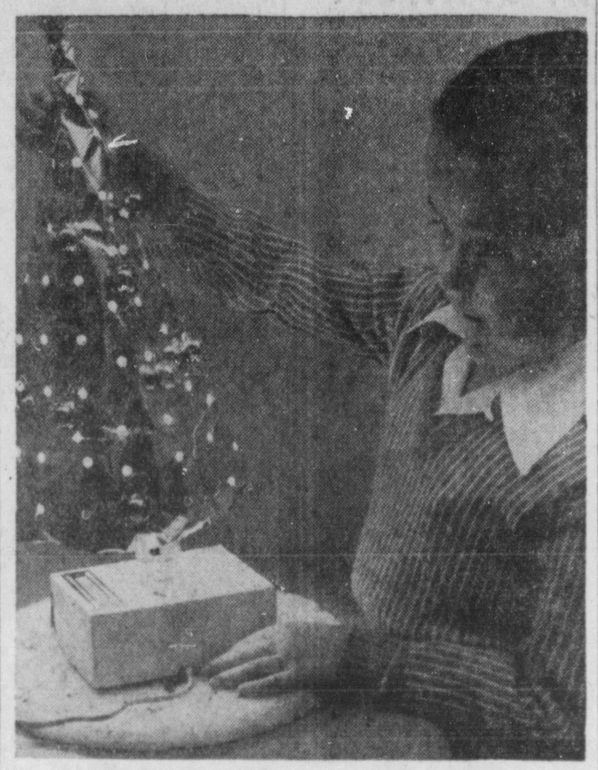
THIS preliminary step will enable you to determine the size and form you desire your tree to be. You may find it necessary to vary the size of your circle according to the size of tree needed to fit over whatever type base is used.

Be sure, however, to make your foil tree large enough so that it will not touch the light bulb.

Using your pattern, trace and cut a circle from foil paper. You can then form your tree, using scotch tape or staples to hold it together.



Tiny, colored ornaments can be added by attaching them to wire hangers and hooding through the holes in tree. (Bent paper clips make satisfactory hangers.) Glue a star or a bit of tinsel on top.

Place the finished tree on a pretty cloth, spangled tissue paper or cotton. Add a touch of Christmas greenery and you have an appealing display Johnny, Suzie—and you—will be proud of.

Children Love Having Own Christmas Trees

In recent years the trend has been toward decorating every room in the house for Christmas — mistletoe in the kitchen, holly in the dining room, the big family tree in the living room and a miniature Christmas tree in the nursery.

There's nothing that gives children more pre-Christmas excitement and fun than having their own playroom tree to decorate. They can spend hours of delicious anticipatory play arranging the small glittering ornaments and adding their own touches in the form of bright toys, strings of cranberries or colored paper chains that they make themselves.

Tiny Trees for Tots Easy To Make

Johnny can make his very own Christmas tree!

Constructed from a piece of aluminum foil, the miniature tree is perfect for children's bedroom or playroom.

It's easy and inexpensive to make and will lend a festive air to any room in the house, den as well as nursery.

HERE'S WHAT your Johnny or Suzie—or you—will need to make a colorful, holiday tree:

A rather small cardboard box (lined and covered with aluminum foil), or a coffee can, or a small table lamp, (any one of three), a white 25 watt light bulb (socket and cord), pencil, scotch tape, small colored ornaments and metal foil of any color.

To assemble the tree with box or coffee can, first remove the lid. Cut a hole in the bottom big enough to insert a light socket.

Turn the box or can upside down and securely mount the socket in an upright position (see picture). Screw in light bulb. This will provide a firm base over which to place the foil tree.

IF YOUR USING a small table lamp, simply remove the shade and you will be ready to place the foil tree over the entire lamp.

To make the tree, take a piece of brown wrapping paper or a sheet of newspaper and first make a pattern by drawing a circle eight inches in diameter. Cut the circle out and form into a cone shaped tree.

THIS preliminary step will enable you to determine the size and form you desire your tree to be. You may find it necessary to vary the size of your circle according to the size of tree needed to fit over whatever type base is used.

Be sure, however, to make your foil tree large enough so that it will not touch the light bulb.

One-Man Candle Factory Lights Many U. S. Churches

Wilder fashions tapers in his candle factory. Here he threads wicks through a mold before he pours beeswax into the mold.

By GROVER BRINKMAN
Central Press Assn.

BURKSVILLE, Ill. — From farmer to candle - maker, that's the story of Clifford Wilder. This middle - aged Irishman is one of the few men who has been able to harness a nobby into a national business, a sort of Horatio Alger success tale concerning bees and religion.

It all started 19 years ago. A neighboring priest, knowing Wilder had an apiary on his farm, approached him one day with the suggestion that he mold a few beeswax candles out of wax remaining after pressing the honeycomb.

"I rigged up a few rough molds, melted some beeswax and poured a few candles for him," says Wilder. The candles looked quite professional, and the priest seemed pleased.

"We lit the candles and stood back to admire them," Wilder continued. "The flame was good, even tapered. I suddenly got the idea that making beeswax candles would be no trouble at all. Here we had good candles on our first attempt."

At this moment his priest friend blew out the candles, waited a moment, then tried to relight them. "But they wouldn't ignite," Wilder says. "We tried— and tried."

A distant candle manufacturer finally was good enough to help him out of his dilemma. You had to use a specially - treated wick, this man informed him.

Cotton cord or string, untreated, wouldn't suffice.

The wick had to be chemically treated, so that it wouldn't burn away too fast.

The manufacturer sent him a small quantity of the chemically-treated wick, and Wilder poured another batch of candles. This time, when he called in his friend, the priest, both of them were elated. The candles would relight at will.

AFTER THAT, Wilder really went to work, designing his own candle - making machinery. He set up a 10 - horsepower boiler for the steam needed, got stainless steel tanks in which to melt the wax, installed filters to clean it, and finally completed a set of different sized molds and other apparatus, such as end - trimmers, bevelers, wick - holders, etc.

In a wooded lot near his home, Wilder has a large apiary, but the amount of beeswax he gets from his own hives is only a drop in the bucket to the amount he needs for his yearly candle output.

Last year, for instance, he purchased about 35,000 pounds of beeswax, getting it from California and Iowa, two states where bee culture is very high.

Natural underground steam present in New Zealand is being harnessed as a source of energy rivaling the atom. Plant to be completed within a year will feed 69,000 kilowatts of electricity into New Zealand's power system by the steam utilization.

Why Do Children Have More Colds in Winter?

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE

Why do our children have so many more colds in winter than in summer?

One reason is the very dry air in most of our well-heated homes. We keep our houses warm, all right. There is scarcely an American home without central heating, but until comparatively recently little attention has been given to the humidity of our warm winter houses.

Warm dry air is quite irritating to the mucous membranes of the nose and throat. The dry air parches these sensitive areas and as a result much of the protective secretions which normally ward off germs are unable to function. As a result, a few germs reaching such dried out tissues get a chance to grow and produce illness. If the nose and throat were in better condition these few germs might easily be killed off by the body's natural defenses.

WINTER DROUGHT

To understand what happens to our houses in winter we must understand this question of humidity. The amount of water that air can absorb depends upon the temperature of the air. The warmer the air the more water it can "hold." When air has absorbed all the water it possibly can at any given temperature we say the humidity is 100 per cent.

Suppose we bring cold winter air into our houses. The temperature of the outside air is, let us say, at freezing temperature and it is full of water—100 per cent humidity. We warm up that air to 70 degrees in the house without adding any water to it. Warm air at 70 degrees could hold a great deal more water than it could at freezing temperature, but since there is no water for it to absorb it is no longer full of water but at about 20 per cent humidity. Air at 20 per cent humidity is dry air and it absorbs every bit of water it comes in contact with. One place the air finds water is in our noses and throats. So each time we breathe in this dry air, the air hangs onto a little of our water. Before long our noses and throats are parched and are good places for those cold germs to grow.

HEALTHY HUMIDITY

A healthy humidity for human beings is about 70 per cent. To maintain healthful conditions within our homes we should add water to the cold outside air when we bring it into our homes.

Any modern heating system have a device for doing just this. However most older type heating systems ignore the need for adding water when air is heated and even quite a few new ones do not do the job adequately.

If there is any question about the adequacy of the humidifying system in your house, a worthwhile investment for your family's health this winter would be an instrument for measuring the humidity. If you find that your house is about as dry as the Sahar desert, you'd better take steps to remedy the situation. You do not need to buy a new heating system—but you can buy some humidifying device to put in various rooms—especially the baby's room. Throwing a wet bath towel over the radiator helps, or running a vaporizer for a few hours. A few green plants which you water frequently also help.

If you keep the humidity in your house around 70 per cent you may well find that the whole family has few colds this winter.

Remember the colder it is outside the drier it will be indoors unless you do something about it.

Calling Camera Fans: Be Ready for Holiday!

So Yuletide picture opportunities won't pass by, be smart and survey your equipment and plan your shooting strategy now. If it's going to be a home movie operation, do you have enough of the right type of color film?

This calls for Type A for artificial light for the big scenes indoors. Then, by adding the proper conversion filter you can shoot outdoor activities or finish the film at a later date in daylight.

Check your wires and add extensions so as to reach a circuit not burdened with the electric oven or a rotisserie at the same time.

And when you throw on your reflector or flood lights, be sure you have ample leeway to move around freely without snagging some piece of furniture.

THIS DOESN'T MEAN you should be shooting movies on the run. That way you'll get jouncy pictures, tough on viewers' eyes. It does mean being able to move with camera and lights to any section of the room where action is taking place. There you adjust focus and lens opening and shoot with a steady camera.

Most home movie fans don't pan properly and then pan too much. They can't resist the urge to let the camera wobble over a wide scene from side to side and up and down.

Panning is an effective stunt when done properly. The camera must be held steady by the photographer as he pivots slowly on an even keel. Timing is important so that when people are reached some appropriate action takes place in the interval they are on camera.

STILL CAMERA fans have a wonderful opportunity to shoot with natural light and the newest fast film. Even without a light meter, which will assure accurate exposures, with Royal - X pan film in the camera you can shoot at 1-25th second at f 4.5 or f 3.5 and be fairly certain that you'll get pictures in normally lit rooms.

The ideal thing would be to test a roll of film in advance so that you can make any adjustments necessary in lighting or lens setting for the actual Christmas Day shooting.

Inexpensive or box - type cameras must still stick to photoflash units to assure well lighted pictures.

Make sure the batteries are in good shape and you have enough flashbulbs on hand. Better yet, put in fresh ones or have replacements handy.

CHRISTMAS IS HERE. Are you ready? Even a gift camera can be put to use if it comes with film and bulbs.

RAF To Play Santa for Jungle Troops

KUALA LUMPUR (AP)—RAF Valetta transports will wing out over Malaya's green jungles Christmas Eve, dropping canisters filled with Christmas fare to British Commonwealth troops forced by the Communist rebellion to spend the festive season in jungle forts, isolated outposts or on patrol.

It will be the 10th Christmas in sucession that Commonwealth forces have had no break from the gruelling jungle warfare.

"I must stress that there will be no question of a letup," a senior army spokesman said.

"It is impossible to say how many men will be out in the jungle on Christmas Eve or Christmas itself. There are always several hundred troops at one time out on patrol but if we were to receive a hot tip on Christmas Eve we would immediately mount an operation," he added.

THE CHRISTMAS "hampers" dropped by parachute will include cold turkey, pudding, nuts, whiskey, brandy, beer and Christmas delicacies.

On Christmas Day, voice aircraft, usually used to call on the Red guerillas to surrender, will broadcast carols to troops in the jungle.

This has become a highlight of Christmas Day in Malaya since first Christmas away from home two years ago. Even the civilian population in the towns look forward to it.

STILL CAMERA fans have a wonderful opportunity to shoot with natural light and the newest fast film. Even without a light meter, which will assure accurate exposures, with Royal - X pan film in the camera you can shoot at 1-25th second at f 4.5 or f 3.5 and be fairly certain that you'll get pictures in normally lit rooms.

The ideal thing would be to test a roll of film in advance so that you can make any adjustments necessary in lighting or lens setting for the actual Christmas Day shooting.

Inexpensive or box - type cameras must still stick to photoflash units to assure well lighted pictures.

Make sure the batteries are in good shape and you have enough flashbulbs on hand. Better yet, put in fresh ones or have replacements handy.

CHRISTMAS IS HERE. Are you ready? Even a gift camera can be put to use if it comes with film and bulbs.

"I guess there isn't a farm kitchen in Louisa I haven't eaten in," he said. "But I wouldn't be caught dead in the parlor."

RAF To Play Santa for Jungle Troops

KUALA LUMPUR (AP)—RAF Valetta transports will wing out over Malaya's green jungles Christmas Eve, dropping canisters filled with Christmas fare to British Commonwealth troops forced by the Communist rebellion to spend the festive season in jungle forts, isolated outposts or on patrol.

It will be the 10th Christmas in sucession that Commonwealth forces have had no break from the gruelling jungle warfare.

"I must stress that there will be no question of a letup," a senior army spokesman said.

"It is impossible to say how many men will be out in the jungle on Christmas Eve or Christmas itself. There are always several hundred troops at one time out on patrol but if we were to receive a hot tip on Christmas Eve we would immediately mount an operation," he added.

THE CHRISTMAS "hampers" dropped by parachute will include cold turkey, pudding, nuts, whiskey, brandy, beer and Christmas delicacies.

On Christmas Day, voice aircraft, usually used to call on the Red guerillas to surrender, will broadcast carols to troops in the jungle.

Before the last drop of beer drains from the wassail bowl, won't someone please propose a toast to those unsung supernumeraries of the holiday season: the Christmas help.

Though thick and thin, cash and credit, children lost and parents found, address unknown and C.O.D. bargain and exchange, they've managed somehow to move the mightly mass of Santa's cargo out of the warehouse, under the tree.

Customers abuse them, knowing their transitory status.

BUT WHEN the rush is over, when the commissions and bonuses have been handed out to the permanent staff, when the Old Man makes his inevitable Christmas speech, they'll be left standing alone and unwanted, like a broken ornament fallen from the tree.

Come, is there none to sing them a carol, send them a card or even wish them a Merry Christmas?

How could there ever be a Christmas without them? Who would wrap the gifts, tote that mail, drive the trucks and man the cash registers

Who would push the line of Christmas ties, hold back the savage attackers at the bargain counter, get the Madison Ave. types into their trench coats by Christmas?

Who could be enlisted, on such short notice, to trim the town tree, bough deck the lamp posts in the business district, tinkle the charity bell or laugh like an idiot for eight hours a day so some unknown and hitherto unseen child can carry his relief in Santa Claus into another year?

None but the Christmas help.

TRUE, there may have been a few hapless souls among them who brought dishonor on the regiment, but by and large they were a marvelous lot.

Perhaps one over-zestful Santa did besmirch his bearded dignity and wind up in court with tottering step and suspicious breath.

Perhaps one partime postal carrier, weary unto death of barking dogs, unreadable addresses and penny postage dues, had the unfeeling temerity to dump a bag of Yuletide mail down a sewer and spend the remainder of his shift recumbent under a tavern table.

MAYBE ONE toy train salesman, woefully weary of saying "don't touch please" and constantly putting cars back on the track, was moved to end it all with management by deliberately dispatching a fast freight down a track already occupied by the Panama Limited.

Perhaps somewhere in this favored Christmas land, one neophite clerk dared to find the customer wrong, trample on the floor walker's carnation or boldly return the fire when somebody's darling advanced on him with a water pistol.

But what are these among so many dedicated denizens of the December payrolls?

WON'T SOMEONE please find it in his heart at this happy time of the year to wish the best and many more to all those unnamed heroes who signed up for a short hitch in Santa's part-time army?

If there is none, then please allow me:

Before the last drop
... Drains from the cup
Please allow me
... To humbly stand up
.. And taking my glass
... Hold it aloft
.. In honor of those
... Who'll soon be laid off.

Elvis' Holiday Album Sung in Timid Whisper

By HUGH MULLIGAN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If the carolers outside your door come decked out in dovetail haircuts and Victorian sidburns, you'll know that Elvis Presley's latest album has had its usual fallout effect on the nation's teen-agers.

In a masterpiece of seasonal miscasting, RCA Victor has called on the undulating one to warble (whisper, actually) a few Christmas carols and has plastered his sugarplum features on the jacket of a gaudy album otherwise decorated with color prints of Elvis in his latest movie, an unseasonal drama entitled "Jailhouse Rock."

The result is ludicrous and pathetic.

It's not that Elvis is irreverent, blasphemous or sacrilegious in chanting such hymns as "Silent Night" and "O Little Town of Bethlehem." Far from it. Most of the time, he's so hushfully reverent in his approach to these unfamiliar themes that he just isn't there at all.

His voice drops down somewhere behind the bellowing organ that has been laboring mightily to salvage the melody and almost completely disappears. Just when it seems that the whole album is about to lapse into a moment of grateful silence, a choir of angelic vocies fades from nowhere, retrieves the traunt tune after something of a search, and hands it back to Elvis, who manages somehow to stagger onto the end.

As Samuel Johnson might have put it: The wonder is not that he did it badly but that he did it at all.

Elvis among the carolers is just one example - albeit and extraordinary one - of the fantastic and abiding faith that record companies have in the sale of Christmas albums.

PRACTICALLY every major singing star, trio, quartet, orchestra instrumentalist and glee club has been summoned for a command performance under the tree.

Among the best, they include Fred Waring, Mario Lanza, Perry Como, Frank Sinatra, Gisele MacKenzie, Lawrence Welk, Sammy Kaye, the Ames Brothers, the LaFalce Brothers, The Four Aces, The Song Spinners, Guy Lombardo, Bing Crosby, Ethel Smith, the Three Sons, the Mills Brothers.

RCA VICTOR makes amends for its Presley piece with a magnificent performance of Berlioz' "L'Enfance du Christ" by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony and a cast that includes Giorgio Tozzi and Cesare Valetti.

Columbia offers Leonard Bernstein, the New York Philharmonic and another standout cast in a new recording of Handel's "Messiah." In the carol field, Angel has an inspiring album by soprano Elizabeth Schwarzkopf and Mercury presents a brilliant album of harp music by Carlos Salzedo.

Two albums of sacred music, both from London Records, are worthy of mention: the Strasbourg Cathedral Choir performing Mozart hymns and motets and the choir and novices of the Monastery of Montserrat singing the sacred office and matines of the Christmas liturgy.

Hot Band Practice Breaks Up School

RANDOLPH, Mass. (AP)—A high school musician really had the joint jumping — but it wasn't his music that did it.

One of the musicians bent down to pick up some music. The bell of the French horn under his arm struck a fire alarm box on the wall, breaking the glass and summoning firemen — in musical lingo — "alle gro vivace."

With Three Sons, Three Horses . . . .

Artist-Mom Leads Busy Life

By DOROTHY ROE

DARIEN, Conn. (AP) — Living proof that an artist need not be a hermit, starving in a dedicated garret, is Ruth Ray, who has managed to hit the top ranks of American artists while raising three small sons, running a big house in the country and riding to hounds twice weekly with her husband, Dr. John R. Graham.

The Graham menage here includes three horses and assorted dogs and cats in addition to the lively young sons—Ian, 8, Willard Reid, 5, and Lyle, 3.

"Sometimes it's a little hectic," says the tall, attractive Mrs. Graham, "But in spite of everything I paint from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m.—every day except Tuesdays and Saturdays, when my husband and I ride with our hunt club.

"On those days we get up about 4 a. m. and I cook up a batch of hot cereal for everybody. Then we saddle up the horses and are on the road by daybreak — the hunt is 20 miles away from our home."

RUTH RAY has been painting and riding most of her life. She paints everything—people, horses and landscapes, has had more than a dozen one-woman shows of her paintings, and is well known for her Christmas card work for the American Artist Group.

One of her best-known paintings is a portrait of her husband's mother, and another is of her youngest son. But also prized by collectors are her paintings of horses and landscapes with a slightly surrealist flavor.

"I prefer to call my style romatic realism," says Ruth. "I don't think anybody is interested in my subconscious."

BEFORE her marriage, Ruth taught for a while at the Art Students League—"I had a horse to support"—and took her paint box abroad, to Europe, Egypt, Mexico and Guatemala. How does she manage such a full life?

"I couldn't do it without an understanding husband," says she.

WAYNESBORO, Pa. (AP)—A thief who ransacked a supply of canned goods, fruits and vegetables gathered by a local church for a charity offering had his own peculiar modus operandi: he stole only commercial canned goods, shunning home canned items.

Christmas Page Reenacted with Biblical Animals

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — There are few places in the world where American school children reenact the pageant of The Nativity with live camels, sheep, goats, a donkey and even a lamb.

Or where Santa Claus' annual arrival is more vividly associated with helicopters or camels by American tots instead of the traditional sleigh and Donder and Blitzen and the other peripatetic reindeer.

These things happen each year in Saudi Arabia—a land of colorful contrast—as some 3,000 American employes of the Arabian American Oil Co., and their families, re-create the spirit of Christmas in isolated desert towns.

The Christmas festivities will be similar in many outward respects to Stateside celebrations, but the Christmas feeling is apt to be more intensified because the three oil districts where Aramco operates go all out to make the Yuletide as traditional and homelike as possible 7,000 miles from familiar American hearthsides.

THESE communities, in eastern Saudi Arabia, are the refining town of Ras Tanura, on the Persian Gulf; Dhahran, the town where Aramco has its headquarters and largest of the three; Abqaiq and Udhailiyah, hubs of the oil-producing fields.

Every American home is decorated indoors and out, a wreath hung on every street door. Christmas suffuses the atmosphere with music recitals, school plays, pageants, community parties, shopping expeditions and strolling carolers.

The most striking of these events are the outdoor night pageants in Dhahran and Ras Tanura where the Birth of the Christ Child is portrayed 1,000 miles from Bethlehem, with the unique charm of reality.

At Ras Tanura, live animals—camels, goats and sheep — walk over open sand; in the Dhahran pageant, they move across the grassy Waajid athletic field to an 85-foot-wide backdrop painted in the center with the entrance to a stable, and on the wings, with ancient village scenes reminscent of the landscape around Bethlehem some 1,957 years ago.

EXCEPT for little girls who play angels and wear halos and white flowing robes, the cast is dressed in authentic costumes.

A school girl portrays Mary and Rides on a donkey while Joseph walks alongside. Boys as shepherds herd the sheep and black goats to the manager; at least one shepherd carries a tiny lamb.

Three boys as the Wise Men from the East ride atop camels, the riders' bodies almost dwarfed by the size of the animals which are led across stage in an impressive procession by young herdsmen.

Dhahran's pageant, larger of the two, with a cast of about 40 children and a mixed adult-teenage chorus of fifty voices, attracts 3,500 people for the hour-long performance.

The spectators sit under the stars on bleacher seats. Usually pageant nights are balmy, for in Saudi Arabia, where summer daytime temperatures reach 120 degrees, the months of November and December are the year's most pleasant.

THERE IS no snow, of course, but Santa uses a combination of ancient and modern modes aptly suited for desert travel, usually switching from helicopter to camel.

Most of the Christmas trees used are artificial since live evergreens are as scarce as trees themselves in a land where all lumber for building must be imported.

A special sale of toys, ornaments and decorations is held by Aramco in November, and after a week-long sale, the remaining stock is transferred to the canteens.

Much of the other personal shopping is done in local Arab market places in the nearby towns of Damman and al-Khobar—all sparkling with the sounds and colors of the Middle East.

CHRISTMAS DAY at home in Saudi Arabia is like Christmas Day anywhere in the States with the morning excitement of opening gifts, mid-day dinner with the traditional turkey and festive fixings, open house for friends, followed by a round of parties running into New Year's Day.

There is even a New Year's Day bowl game, the Waajid Bowl, between Dhahran and U.S. Air Force teams for the touch-tackle football championship of the Persian Gulf Conference. It is complete with an elected bowl "queen" and her court of pretty attendants.

EXCEPT for little girls who play angels and wear halos and white flowing robes, the cast is dressed in authentic costumes.

A school girl portrays Mary and Rides on a donkey while Joseph walks alongside. Boys as shepherds herd the sheep and black goats to the manager; at least one shepherd carries a tiny lamb.

Three boys as the Wise Men from the East ride atop camels, the riders' bodies almost dwarfed by the size of the animals which are led across stage in an impressive procession by young herdsmen.

Dhahran's pageant, larger of the two, with a cast of about 40 children and a mixed adult-teenage chorus of fifty voices, attracts 3,500 people for the hour-long performance.

The spectators sit under the stars on bleacher seats. Usually pageant nights are balmy, for in Saudi Arabia, where summer daytime temperatures reach 120 degrees, the months of November and December are the year's most pleasant.

THERE IS no snow, of course, but Santa uses a combination of ancient and modern modes aptly suited for desert travel, usually switching from helicopter to camel.

Most of the Christmas trees used are artificial since live evergreens are as scarce as trees themselves in a land where all lumber for building must be imported.

A special sale of toys, ornaments and decorations is held by Aramco in November, and after a week-long sale, the remaining stock is transferred to the canteens.

Much of the other personal shopping is done in local Arab market places in the nearby towns of Damman and al-Khobar—all sparkling with the sounds and colors of the Middle East.

CHRISTMAS DAY at home in Saudi Arabia is like Christmas Day anywhere in the States with the morning excitement of opening gifts, mid-day dinner with the traditional turkey and festive fixings, open house for friends, followed by a round of parties running into New Year's Day.

There is even a New Year's Day bowl game, the Waajid Bowl, between Dhahran and U.S. Air Force teams for the touch-tackle football championship of the Persian Gulf Conference. It is complete with an elected bowl "queen" and her court of pretty attendants.

Women Seem To Like Sacks and Barrels

By DOROTHY ROW
By The Associated Press

Fashion came by the sack or the barrel in 1957

Maybe it was because of general world unrest or the frightening sight of man-made moons zooming around the heavens. Maybe it was the result of simple desperation on the part of designers searching for something to startle the public. Whatever the reason women reverted to the styles of 30 years ago, with the sack and the barrel silhouettes the big news in fashion.

The beltless, shapeless sack dress (also known as the chemise and the shift) was an important on the 1957 style horizon as it was back among the flappers of 1927. And the barrel skirt and coat ran it a close second. So once more women's fashions became the center of a storm of controversy unmatched since the late Christian Dior announced the abolition of the bosom.

The fashion world drew up its battle lines. Families were divided against each other. Some designers cried: "Never!" Others shouted: "Of course!" Some women announced that they wouldn't be caught dead in one of the new creations. Others went mad for the sacks and bought them in all colors. Husbands laid down the law and wives wept.

AS USUAL, despite all the tumult and shouting, the new fashion caught on. American designers, with their usual skill, succeeded in retaining the essentials of the chemise line and still making it fairly wearable, except for ladies with size 48 hips, who don't look very well in any other style anyway.

Dresses which looked like freaks when they first arrived from Paris were adapted, modified, copied down and gently urged upon a public which, after recovering from its first state of shock, began to murmur: "Well, they're really not so bad after all, are they?"

"It was found that the beltless silhouette actually looked smart on tall, slender girls, and so short, fat girls, as usual, started wearing them too, in the fond belief that would make them look like their willowy sisters."

With the new unfitted sacks, something had to be done to take the mind off the general slack look of the feminine populace, so accessories became terrifically important. Women took to wearing great ropes of beads, elaborate costume jewelry, kingsize earrings and armfuls of bracelets.

FUR HATS this winter were practically a uniform, along with the ubiquitous mink stole. Some women went in for matching fur handbags, or carried muffs.

Shoes staged a fashion revolution of their own, emerging with long, pointed toes and needle heels. Last year's shoes suddenly looked stubby and out of date, and the footwear business boomed.

With the understated look of the dress, hairdos also became more important, and the tousled, windblown look was the thing for women's crowning glory. This was not the boyish bob of the 1920's, but a fluffier, slightly longer hair style, with more width at the sides.

IT WAS A year of unrest, of frantic dissension and of considerable nostalgia in the world of fashion—a year when the greatest single influence on the modes of the moment was Gabrielle Chanel, who first introduced the vogue of the uncorseted look, the sweater-and- skirt with a rope of pearls in Paris back in 1925.

It was the year that saw the passing of fashion's reigning monarch, Christian Dior, who had set the pace for the Paris haute couture each season until his sudden death in the fall, exactly a decade after his spectacular debut.

It was a year when a woman could wear a gunnysack, a rope of pearls and a mink hat, and be in the height of fashion.

Christkindli Visits Swiss Youngsters

In Switzerland, it is not Santa Claus, but Christkindli, the Christ Child, who makes the rounds of Swiss homes on Christmas Eve.

The radiant angel is said to come from the North, traveling on a fairy - like sleigh, pulled by reindeer much like our Santa. Christkindli brings good Swiss children a beautiful tree, and many gifts. Like Santa, he insists that little children be good at all times, and he admonishes naughty youngsters.

Tree Harvesting Good for Forests

Cutting an evergreen for a Christmas tree is not a harmful practice, so don't feel guilty about it. Even the trees that are sold in market places were "harvested" as a crop to give living room to regular plantings.

Christmas trees are grown on poorer forest soils and wet bog areas where evergreens grow far too slowly to produce a lumber or pulpwood crop — thus Christmas trees are the only profitable harvest that can come off that land.

Some trees do come from top lumber areas, but these are "thinnings." In growing trees as a crop it is often necessary to thin out the smaller trees so others will have room to live and grow.

Thus it is that the "thinnings" serve a number of uses; they bring Christmas joy into the home; provide income for the forester; and serve as "lift insurance" for upcoming timber crops.

Iron forms about four per cent of the earth's crust.

Santa Claus, as We Know Him Creation of 2 Famous Men

The first was Clement Clark Moore, author of "A Visit to St. Nicholas," better known to us as, " 'Twas the Night before Christmas." Moore actually described Santa and gave him the famous reindeer and sleigh.

NAST DREW the familiar, fat, merry old fellow with red cheeks and white beard, dressed in red, wearing a cap and boots, carrying a pack of toys and smoking a short pipe.

The artist then gave Santa a spy-glass so that during the year he might pick out the good children from the bad, and also a big book in which to write their names and keep records.

This conception of Santa Claus first appeared in 1863. Since that time the pictured Santa has been the same, although the spy - glass and pipe seem to have been dropped by the way.

Ethan Allen, hero of Ticonderoga, spent his last few years in Burlington, Vermont, where he is buried.

T. R. Disapproved Of Yule Trees-- But Not for Long

President Theodore Roosevelt, an ardent conservationist, once disapproved of Christmas trees and for several years forbade any being brought into the White House.

But one year his sons, Archie and Quentin, smuggled one in and set it up in Archie's room. After the discovery, Gifford Pinchot, a great forester and conservationist, soothed T. R. by explaining that supervised and careful harvesting of Christmas trees— as thinnings— was good for the forests Ever since, the White House has had an indoor tree.

The Legacy of Luke

Careful Researcher Establishes Time, Reason for Bethlehem Journey

EDITOR'S NOTE: The classic Biblical example of lack of charity is the innkeeper's refusal to make room for the travel-weary Mary and Joseph on what now is called Christmas Eve. Here is an account of how Luke might have obtained the background for this touching story.

By GEORGE CORNELL
Associated Press Religion Writer

The old, clay - brick inn stood just inside the east gate of Bethlehem. Luke, the physician and writer, threaded his way through the street traffic, tired and dust-grimed.

So this was the inn that had no room for Mary as her time grew near. A wind, carrying the first chill of winter, rippled Luke's cloak as he made his way toward it.

He had trudged many leagues in the last few months, assembling his chronicle of Christ. He had been over the nearly 100 miles that Mary and Joseph traveled to reach this ancestral city of David. He knew their travail.

But Luke, a painstaking researcher, had also gathered items in distant places, in the consulates of Antioch and Damascus, prying into official Roman annals and enactments to pinpoint the time of the nativity of his Lord.

"IN THOSE DAYS," he would write later, "a decree went out from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be enrolled. This was the first enrollment, when Quirinius was governor of Syria." None but Luke gives the date or the circumstances.

Historians for centuries disputed his report, claiming Quirinius was not Syria's governor until 6 A. D. But modern archeological findings show Quirinius previously had been military governor when Rome ordered its first massive census.

The careful Luke was correct.

These enrollments, held at 14-year intervals by the empire following that first one, were not to collect taxes, but to compile lists for future levies. Jews, by custom, had to register at the original seat of their tribe or clan.

FOR MARY and Joseph, this had meant a hard, hazardous trip from Nazareth, with her in most fragile condition. All of it had happened 60 years before Luke pieced together the sequence, but he had verified each step of the way.

As suggested by Matthew and by Mary's own words, however tactfully phrased, Luke knew there had been some shock among people in Nazareth when she conceived.

Although she was not required by law to accompany Joseph for the enrollment, she did so rather than remain alone among tongue-wagging neighbors, even with the delivery of her child near at hand. She needed her husband at her side.

Luke had retraced their journey, from the slopes of Nazareth down into the mosquito - swarming marshes of the Jordan and on into the rocky footpaths of Judea.

THIS ROUTE, though often traveled by Galileans to avoid the hostile main road through anti-Jewish Samaria, was an exhausting, rugged passage, cruelly hot in summer, a soggy, dank morass in winter.

Mary and Joseph made the trip in the cold, wet season, with their one donkey, a bag of food, a goatskin of water and a few coverlets folded on the donkey's back. It must have been a terrible strain.

On the way down from Nazareth, Luke had halted briefly several times to treat the sick. He administered wormwood extract to a child in Nain with an intestinal infection.

A little farther on, he bound up a sickle cut on a farmer's leg after disinfecting it with wine oil. Near Beth-shean, he put a hot fig poultice on a stonemason with a furuncle on his neck, then gathered his apothecary kit, and went on.

"Inasmuch as you have done it to one of the least of these my brethren," Jesus had said, "ye have done it unto me."

AS LUKE followed the course of Joseph and Mary along the serpentine river, with its over-grown swamps and bogs, he could visualize the trials they met. Creatures hissed and croaked in the moss-draped mangroves, and insects buzzed at one's ears.

At night sparks of eyes glittered from the foliage, jackals yapped, bats whirred overhead and undergrush snapped with the movement of wild boars, cats and creepers. Mary and Joseph must have camped here at least one night.

It was a 40 - mile stretch through the river bottom, but finally, the road swung back eastward, across the fords toward Archelais and Jericho in Judea.

Altogether, the trip must have taken them at least three days, probably four, with worry about Mary in every step. Possibly they spent a night in a vineyard watchman's hut, or with other strangers. Jewish law urges such hospitality.

LUKE had tramped on along the couple's path, through the odd, barren sink near Jericho, with its whirling columns of dust, on past Bethany and Jerusalem, climbing the torturous mountain roads, on past Rachel's tomb, and up the terraced plateau that sweeps upward like the walls of an amphitheater, dotted with pink almond trees and olives, to the heights of Bethlehem.

This was ancient Ephrath, patriarchal seat of David, city of the shepherd king— Bethlehem.

"And Joseph also went up from Galilee, from the city of Nazareth, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem because he was of the house and lineage of David, to be enrolled with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child."

THE INN was a two - floor structure, forming an enclosed courtyard in the rear. On the upper level were sleeping quarters for travelers. Below animals were sheltered. Luke could hear their bawling and braying.

The front gate faced the street.

Along it moved donkey pack trains, burdened with wine casks and bales of flax. Traders haggled. Women carried baskets of linen to wash at a nearby pool. Slaves, with litters of rich owners, shouted, "Make way!"

LUKE shouldered his way through idlers on the columned portico, and into the inn's big public room. A profusion of smoke, odors, shouts, laughter, babbling and lights assailed him.

This must have been what the desperate Joseph encountered when, his voice shaking and pleading, he asked a room for his weary wife with her child only hours away.

"And while they were there, the time came for her to be delivered."

IN THE BIG room, a knot of leather-garbed Roman soldiers held tankards of cider, and sang lustily. Men wandered about, or lounged on seats. Arms reached out at serving women as they passed with steaming platters, amid loud laughter.

Luke approached the distraught innkeeper. "Might you be able. ." He did not get to finish the question. The innkeeper barked:

Luke, there at the bustling inn, knew how it must have been for Joseph and Mary.

"And Joseph also went up from Galilee, from the city of Nazareth, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and lineage of David, to be enrolled with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child."

THE INN was a two - floor structure, forming an enclosed courtyard in the rear. On the upper level were sleeping quarters for travelers. Below animals were sheltered. Luke could hear their bawling and braying.

The front gate faced the street.

Along it moved donkey pack trains, burdened with wine casks and bales of flax. Traders haggled. Women carried baskets of linen to wash at a nearby pool. Slaves, with litters of rich owners, shouted, "Make way!"

LUKE shouldered his way through idlers on the columned portico, and into the inn's big public room. A profusion of smoke, odors, shouts, laughter, babbling and lights assailed him.

This must have been what the desperate Joseph encountered when, his voice shaking and pleading, he asked a room for his weary wife, with her child only hours away.

"And while they were there, the time came for her to be delivered."

IN THE BIG room, a knot of leather-garbed Roman soldiers held tankards of cider, and sang lustily. Men wandered about, or lounged on seats. Arms reached out at serving women as they passed with steaming platters, amid loud laughter.

Apparently he was the inn keeper. A younger man was roasting cuts of meat over two burning tripods. Somewhere a dish crashed.

Luke approached the distraught innkeeper. "Might you be able. ." He did not get to finish the question. The innkeeper barked:

Sorority Girls Defy 'White Father'

The bill was for $15,730,015, considerably higher than the normal charge. A quick trip to City Hall corrected the error and reduced the bill considerably more than 15 million dollars.

ALBPRCHT DURER, the German Renaissance painter who achieved unsurpassed perfection in his woodcuts, executed this Visitation scene as part of a series on the life of the Virgin. During her visit to Elizabeth Mary first made known she was to be the mother of the Messiah.

Dear Santa Claus . . . 'Big Day' Nears for Kindergarteners

When you are 5 years old and want to write Santa— you have a slight problem. Especially when you can't write!

This was the situation at the morning kindergarten class at St Andrews Episcopal Church. All 23 youngsters attending the morning class were enthusiastic about the idea, "but how do you spell 'perfume,' or 'machinegun,' or 'ammunition,' or even 'dog.' "

"By the way," a small voice popped up, "how do you make a 'd.' "

This was no serious problem so far as Mrs. Jack Montgomery, in charge of the class, was concerned. She collected toy catalogues, and, with the paste and scissors already on hand, the class was in business.

THE KINDERGARTEN classes have been held for the past six years. All children must be 5 years old before Sept. 30, the same age rule that applied for public school admission.

Mrs. Winston Hill is in charge of the afternoon class, which, like the morning class, currently could accommodate additional pupils.

A Christmas Greeting to Our Wonderful Community

Another Christmas Season is here. Each year we pause to give thanks to God for our many blessings; our houses, our families, our friends, our community, State and Nation.

We think of loved ones who have gone on and brush away a tear as we place a Christmas Wreath upon their graves.

We have faith in the future. In the ability of our people to carry on our fine traditions. Faith in our children to do greater and finer things than we have done.

We sincerely wish all our customers and friends all the success and happiness possible at this Christmas time and for the New Year.

Record-Herald Camera Sees 'Faces of Christmas'

Rita Coil feels she doesn't have to take this pushing around from any little boy — even if Christmas is close. Just because its cleanup time and everyone has a moment is no excuse.

Only one thing can be more interesting than pasting up pretty pictures to show Santa what you want for Christmas, and that is reading the letters written by all your fellow classmates. Mrs. Jack Montgomery, center, enjoyed the letters as much as the children.

Bachelors Wanted In Wyoming City

CASPER, Wyo (AP) — Casper has promoted itself right out of its own claim as bachelor capital of America.

Two years ago Casper proudly boasted more single men per single woman than any other city in the country— and used it as a talking point for young women secretaries.

A special census this fall reversed things. The census shows 17,612 males and 17,864 females.
